DEDICATION

To be a good physician one must be competent, knowledgeable and compassionate — a tall order in itself. But to be a good medical educator requires even more: one must also have the skill to transmit knowledge, the character to inspire compassion, and the tenacity to draw from students the best that they have to offer.

Louis L. Sanders has these qualities. After his graduation from the University of Arkansas College of Medicine in 1955, he performed an internship in Philadelphia; recognizing his error in leaving Arkansas, he returned to complete a residency in internal medicine here. He has remained a part of the medical education system in Little Rock ever since. He accepted an appointment to the medical staff of the Little Rock Veteran's Administration Hospital in 1960, and was named assistant chief of the Department of Medicine in 1975. Throughout his advancement he has remained accessible to students and housestaff alike, always willing to listen and help.

He criticizes without condemning; he educates without belittling. He is an excellent role model for the physician-in-training, from sophomore medical student to senior medicine resident.

"I have always felt that the true textbook for the pupil is his teacher." — Mahatma Gandhi —

The first Medical Department Building. 1879-1880

When the medical branch of Arkansas Industrial University first opened its doors in 1879, enrollment numbered twenty-three hardy souls. The physical plant consisted of one building, formerly the Sperindio Hotel. Arkansas saw the graduation of its first native-trained physician in March of 1880. The school was fiscally independent; it was financed wholly by the students, who had to buy tickets to attend the teaching lectures. Prior to 1885 the only requirement for admission to the school was the ability to pay.

In this, her one hundred and fourth year, UAMS employs over four hundred faculty members to teach fourteen hundred students and four hundred post-doctoral residents, interns and fellows in the Colleges of Medicine, Nursing, Pharmacy and Health Related Professions and in the Graduate Division. Many of the faculty and students rotate through one or more of the UAMS affiliated hospitals: LRVAH, Ft. Roots, St. Vincent's, Baptist Medical Center, Arkansas Children's Hospital, Central Baptist, Arkansas Mental Health Services, Doctor's Hospital, or one of the Area Health Education Centers.

Things have changed a bit since the state Legislature resolved "that medicine and surgery are humbugs, and that all medical colleges should be declared nuisances and injurious to the health of the Commonwealth."

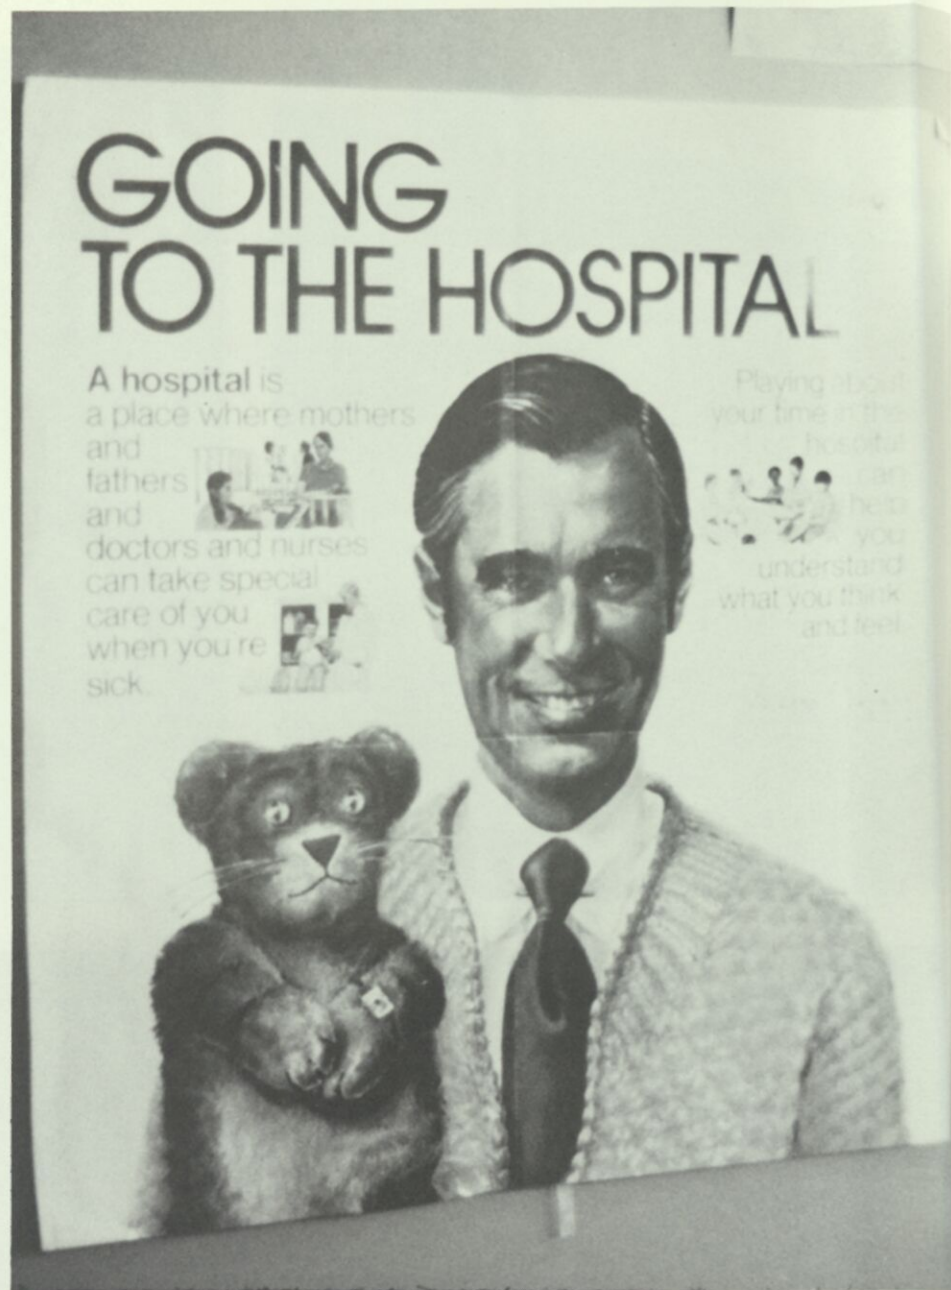

In 1910 a group of citizens in Morrilton founded the Arkansas Home Finding Society to care for the orphaned and neglected children of Arkansas. The institution moved to Little Rock in 1912 and was incorporated as the Arkansas Children's Home Society. The Society's function was to find foster homes for children who otherwise would have no place to go.

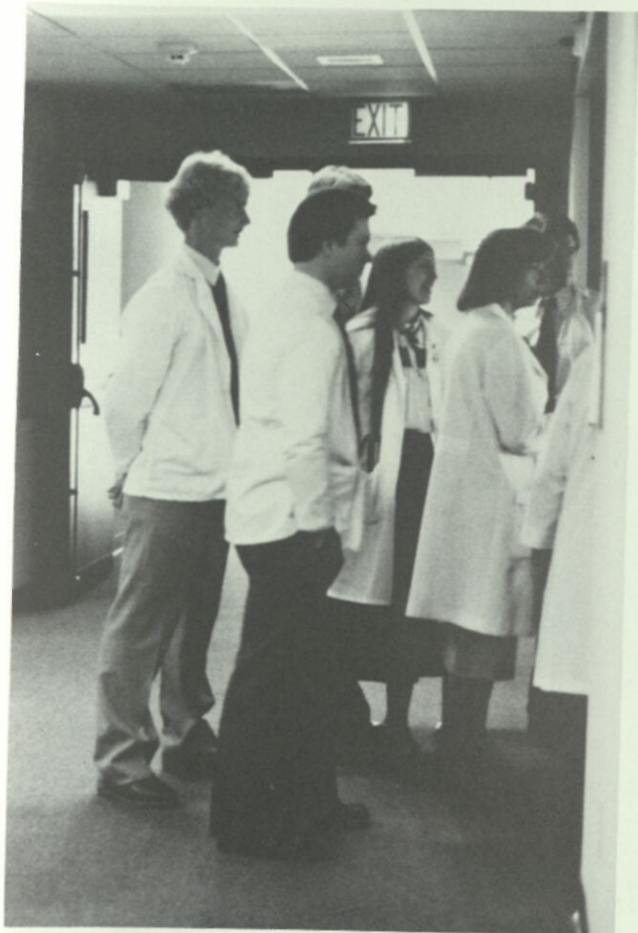

Hospital facilities were added in 1924 to provide the needed health care to the growing number of children who lived in the home. The hospital was fully accredited in 1936. State governmental agencies gradually took over the orphanage and placement functions which the home originally provided, and in 1955 those operations were completely phased out of the hospital. The name was officially changed to Arkansas Children's Hospital.

A new era began for Children's Hospital in 1969, when the hospital entered into a formal educational affiliation with the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences. Children's now serves as the primary pediatric teaching facility for medical students, postdoctoral residents, nursing students and a variety of paramedical professionals.

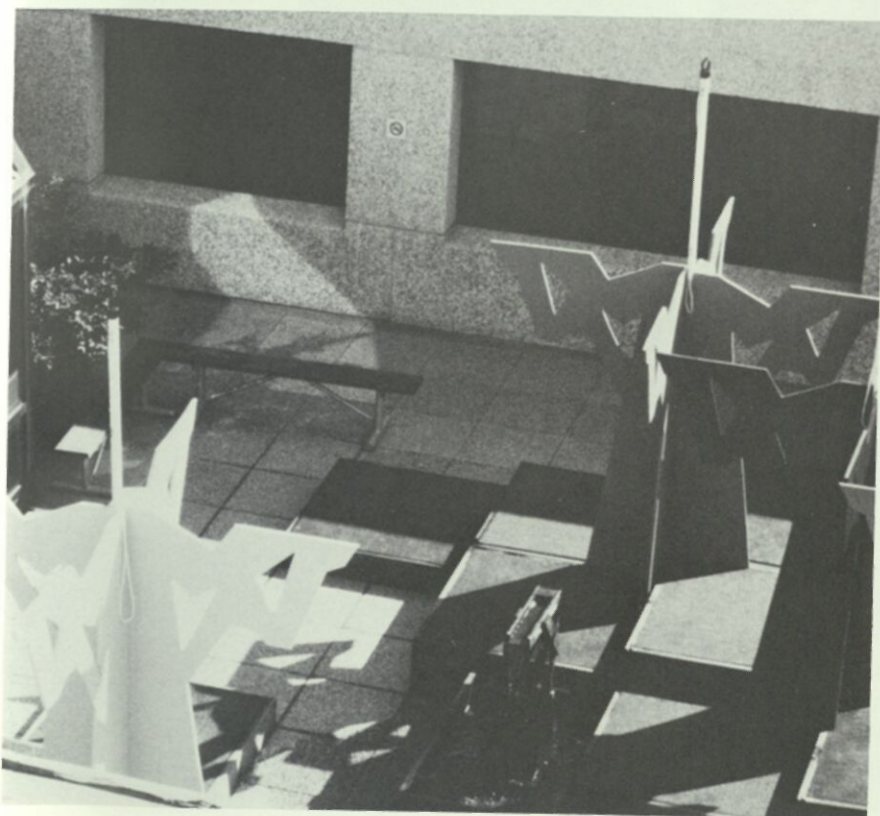

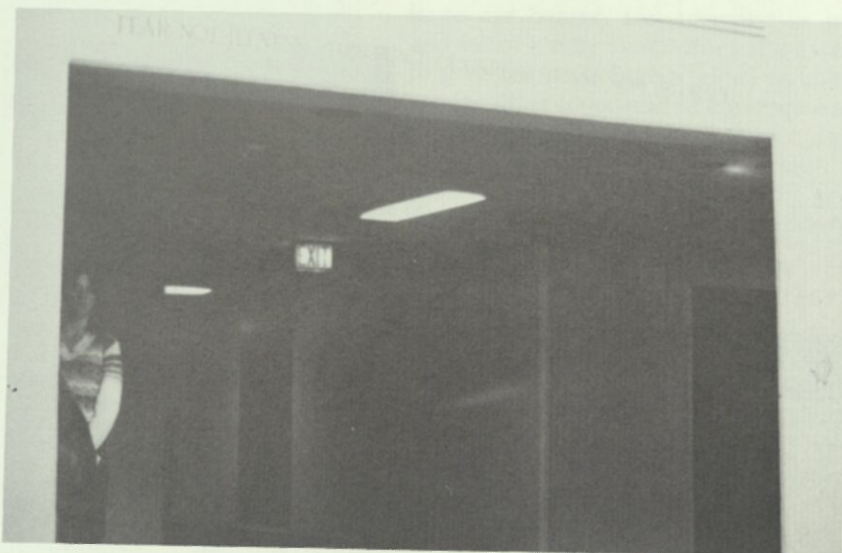

Expansion of facilities and services has been rapid in the last two decades at Children's Hospital. New construction was added in 1966 and 1978, and the new east wing was dedicated in May of 1982. With completion of the new wing, the hospital's capacity expanded to 160 beds plus 20 neonatal intensive care bassinets. Besides the 48 new patient rooms, the expansion program included six new technologically sophisticated surgery suites, and ambulatory surgery center, a new burn center, and a 24 hour emergency room and trauma center. With completion of this renovation and expansion program, Children's Hospital became one of the 20 largest pediatric medical centers in the country. In fiscal 1981-1982, over 5,300 children were admitted to the hospital for a total of 34,000 patient days. There were more than 67,000 patient visits to the outpatient clinics and the emergency room.

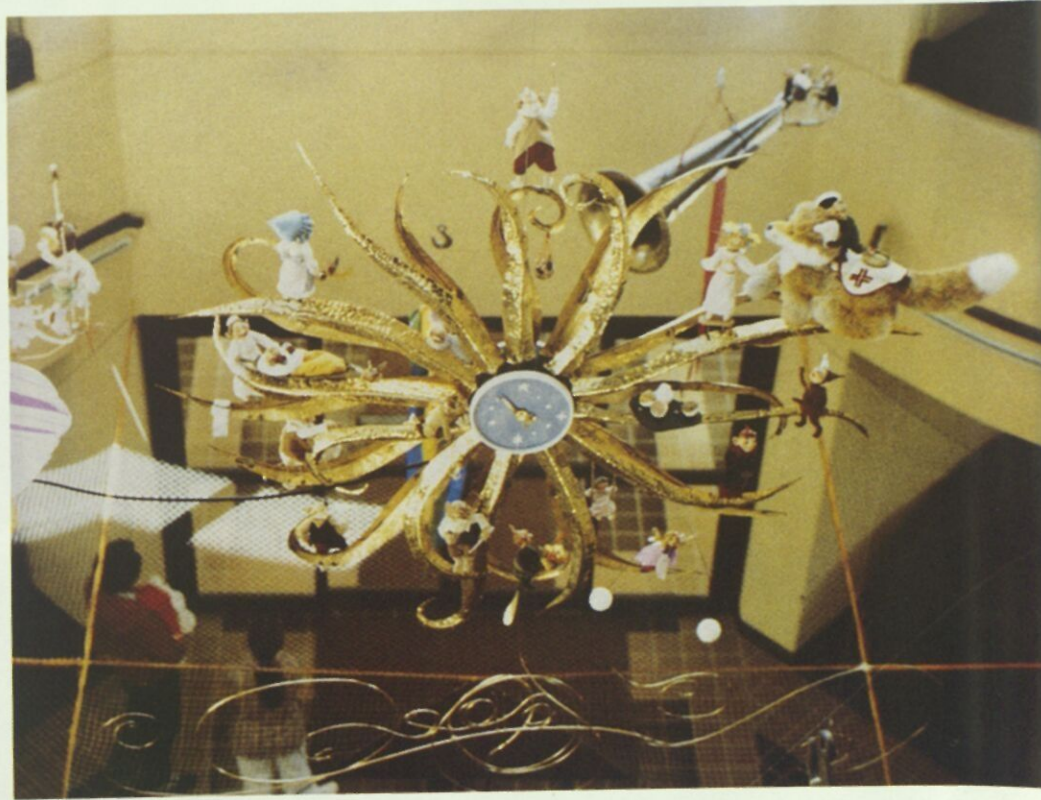

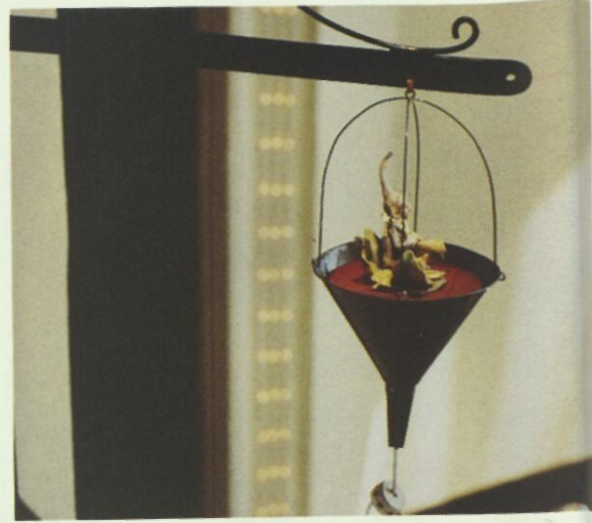

The technological sophistication of the new expansion, important though it is, has not been allowed to overshadow the reason for existence of Arkansas Children's Hospital: the provision of competent, compassionate medical care to the children of Arkansas.

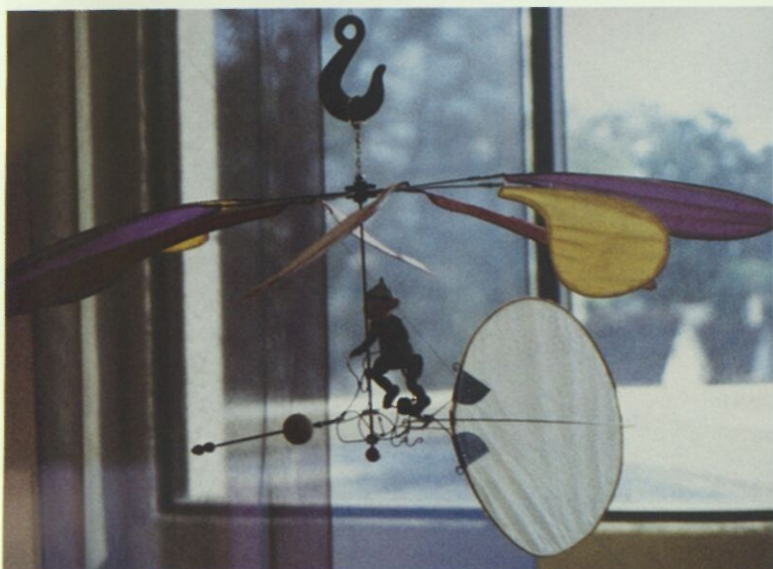

God sends children for another purpose than merely to keep up the race — to enlarge our hearts; and to make us unselfish and full of kindly sympathies and affections; to give our souls higher aims; to call out all our faculties to extended enterprise and exertion; and to bring round our firesides bright faces, happy smiles, and loving, tender hearts. My soul blesses the great Father, every day, that he has gladdened the earth with little children.

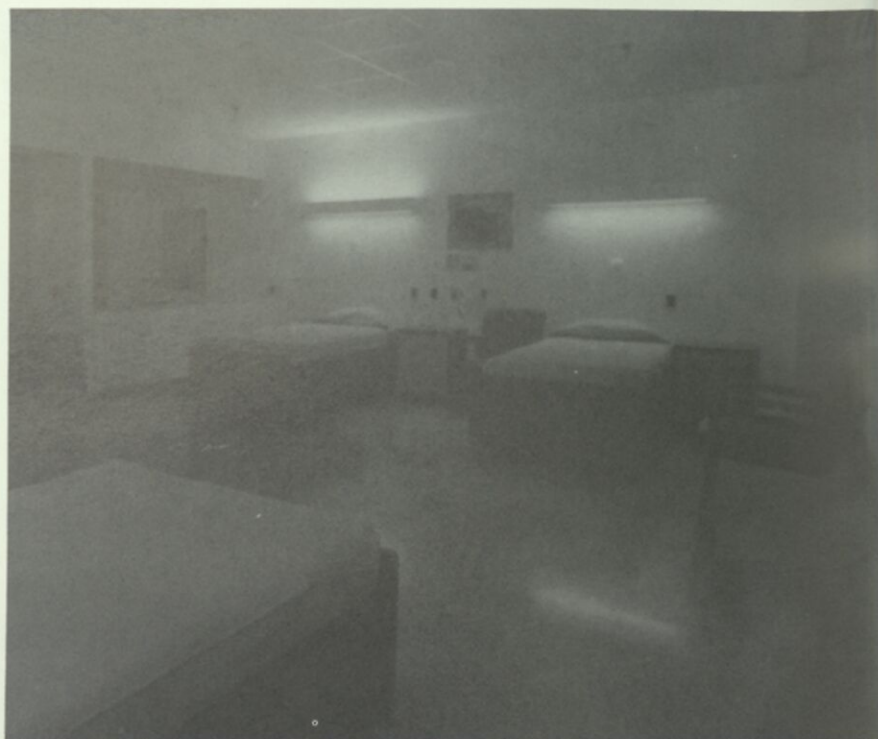

Mary Botham Howitt

In 1920 there was little that could be done for the chronic schizophrenic; more often than not the "solution" was to place him in an institution, with little hope for cure, to save society the embarrassment of confronting him. Ft. Roots was such an institution. It sat on 240 acres on top of a hill, suitably isolated from the community. When effective anti-psychotic medications became available, the role that Ft. Roots played began to change, but most of the community didn't notice. Gradual change is easy to overlook, when people don't wish to look too closely.

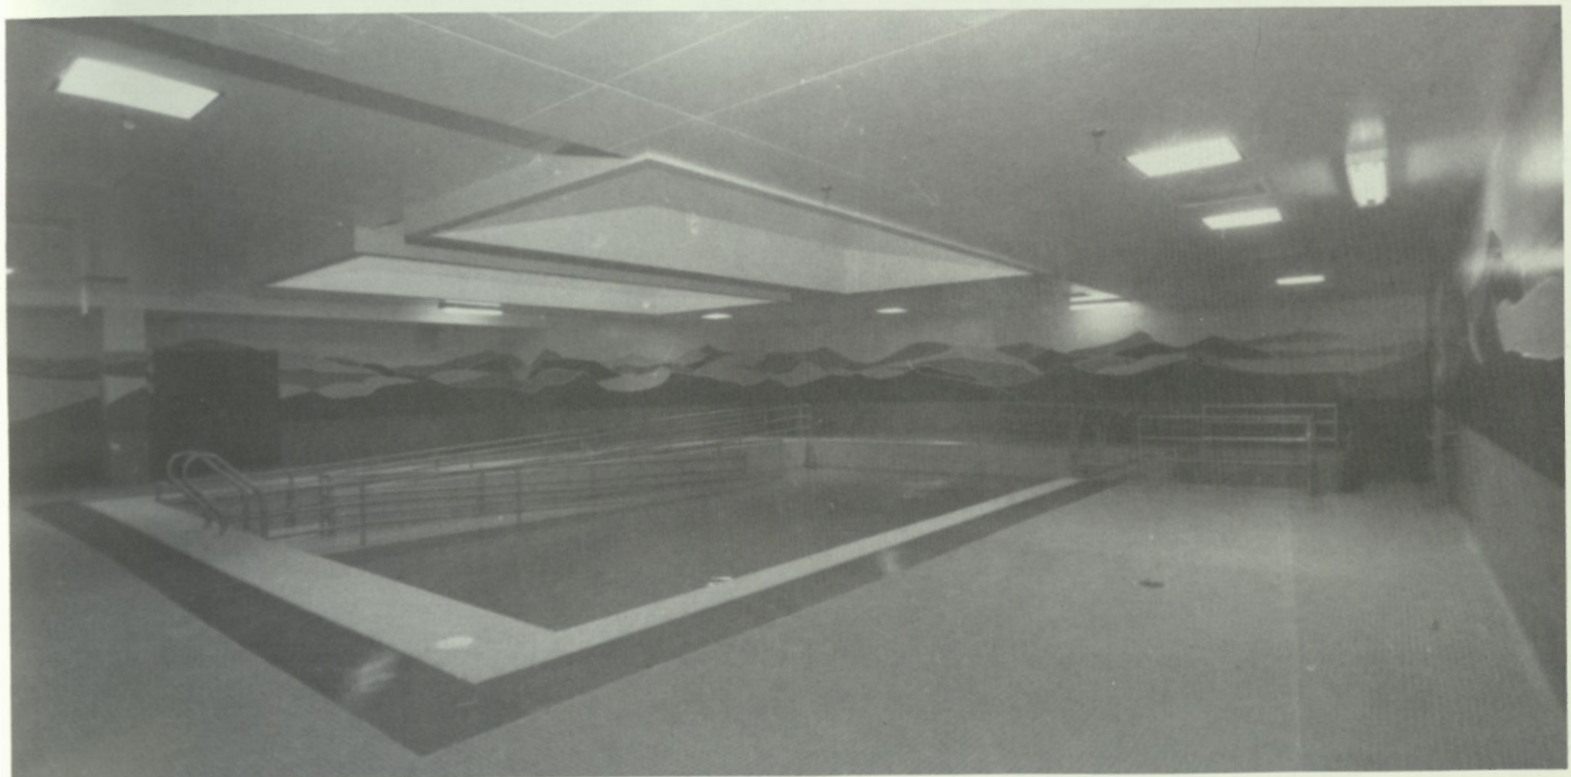

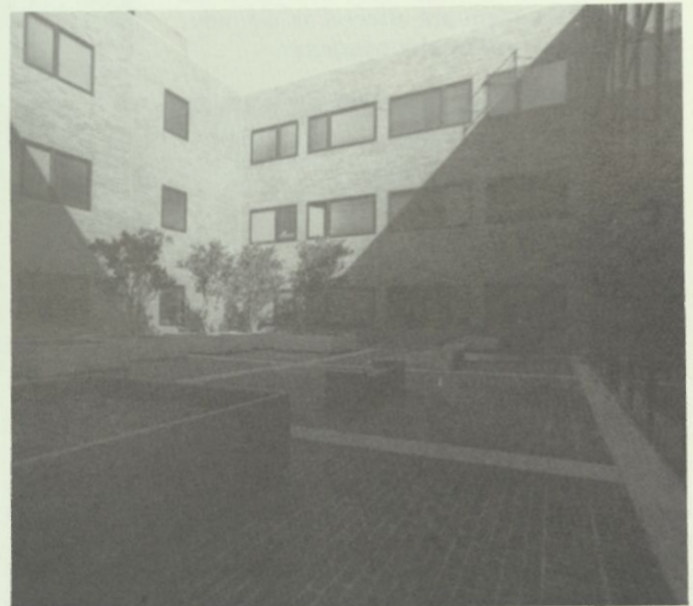

November of 1982 brought a sudden change to Ft. Roots which ought to call attention to the slower, more important change. The sudden change was the opening of the first half of the new hospital; the slower change has been the shift in patient population away from men with chronic psychiatric illness. Of the 1000 beds in the new hospital, only 360 are occupied by psychiatric patients. The remaining beds go to neurology, alcohol and drug abuse, intermediate medicine and nursing home care. Patients with all kinds of chronic illness, whether physical or mental, find aid at Ft. Roots.

Every census reveals an increase in the number of elderly in our population. The new Logan H. Roots Hospital serves their needs in two ways: first, by providing the elderly veteran the facilities in which he can lead a dignified, decent life among other elderly men; second, by serving as a training institution so that medical and paramedical personnel can learn how better to care for the needs of the elderly.

As long as there have been universities, libraries have been popular places to sit and study, or just sit. If one of the early graduates of Arkansas' medical school could see the library, he would be astounded — not just by the vast growth of knowledge, but at our varied ways of retrieving it. Textbooks and bound journals he would recognize, but what would he do with microfiche? And imagine him entering the A-V library to encounter carousel slide projectors and video-cassettes. Not only do medical theories change, but even the methods by which we process them are altered as we move into the era of the computer.

In the mid-nineteenth century, the only provision made for the care of the mentally ill in Arkansas was an 1838 law placing responsibility for maintenance of the insane on their parents, children, or grandchildren. The furiously mad were often confined to the poorhouse or the jail.

The state Legislature, at the insistence of Dr. P.O. Hooper, in 1873 authorized the appointment of five trustees and the appropriation of $50,000 to buy land and erect an institution for lunatics. The Brooks Baxter War in 1876 intervened, preventing the first board of trustees from doing more than acquiring a site. It was not until 1881 that construction was begun on the Arkansas Lunatic Asylum, which was completed the following year at the present location of the State Hospital.

The first patient was accepted into the asylum in February of 1883; within six months the original capacity of 250 patients was exceeded. So it was to continue for the next seventy years, as expansion of capacity always lagged behind demand.

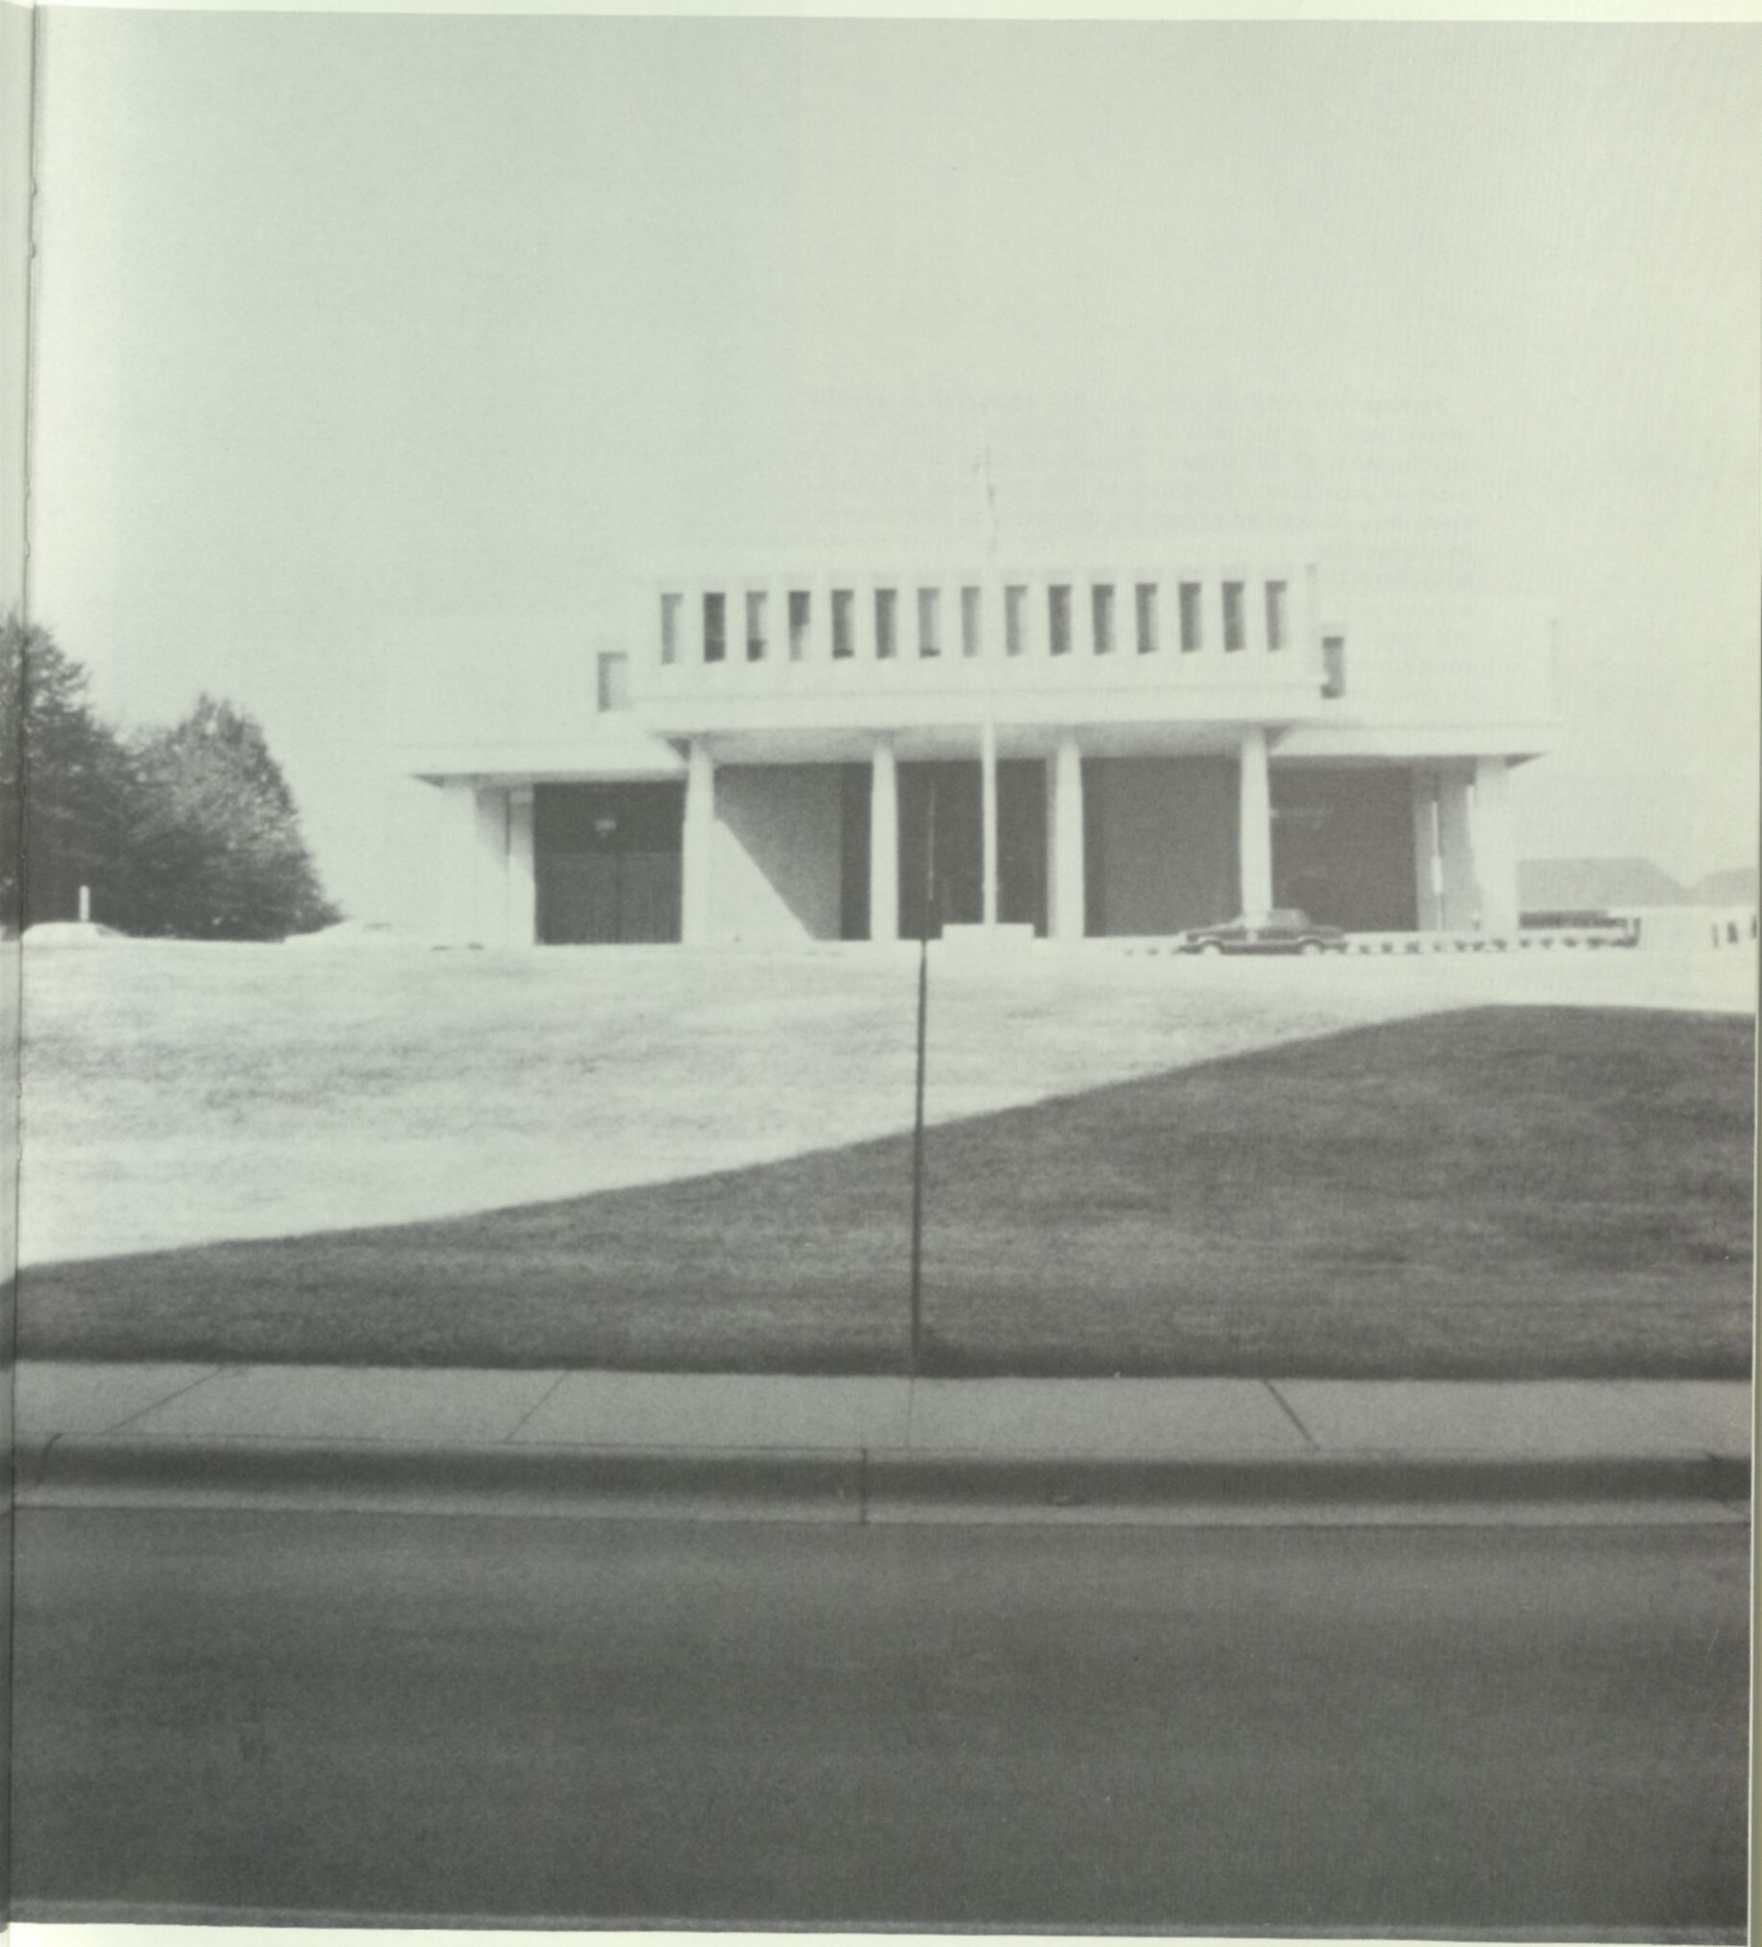

Treatment in the early days was directed mainly toward providing a place for the mentally ill away from society. There were some halting attempts at cure, and occupational therapy was emphasized from the beginning. Originally a truck farm, orchard, dairy, hog farm and poultry farm were maintained on the grounds to keep the patients occupied and to augment the food supply. Effective drug therapy was not available until the introduction of Luminal, an anticonvulsant, in 1920. Luminal was also used to control agitation. It was not until the summer of 1954, with the introduction of the major tranquilizers chlorpromazine and reserpine, that drug therapy held out the hope for real control of mental illness. Introduction of effective drug therapy was an important factor in the gradual decline in the patient load from its peak of 5,086 in 1956.

From 1956 to the present, drug therapy has improved, both in efficacy and in the number of uses. With the growing awareness of the public that mental illness is a treatable disease, the stigma associated with mental illness has decreased. In 1965, a cheerful, functional new facility replaced the old Lunatic Asylum, and the name was changed from the Arkansas State Hospital to Arkansas Mental Health Services. There has been increasing emphasis on maintenance of mental health and decreasing use of physical restraints, to the point that the straitjacket has become an historical relic, existing only in museums or private collections.

Arkansas has long been one of the leaders in community mental health care. The association between Arkansas Mental Health Services and the UAMS campus has benefitted both institutions.

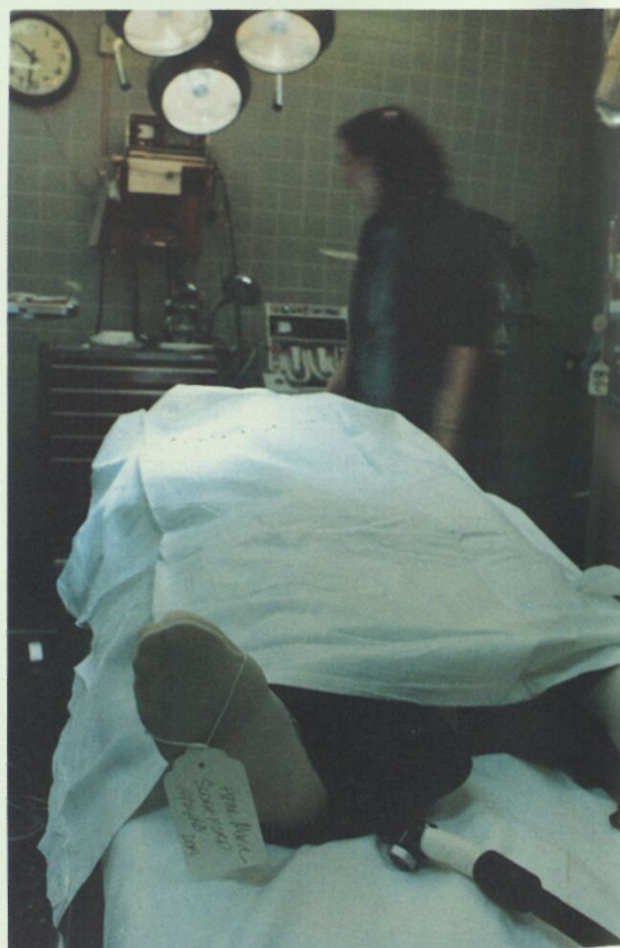

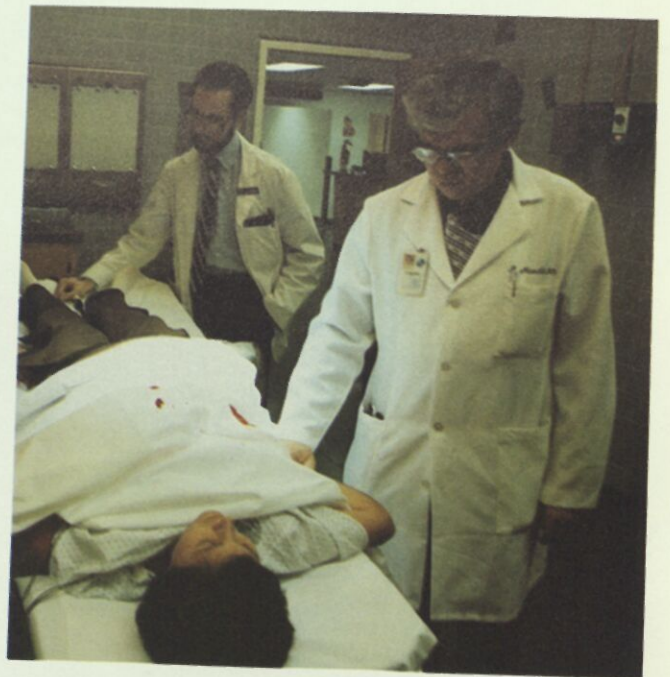

Perhaps no field of medicine has changed as rapidly in recent years as the provision of emergency care. Since the appointment of Dr. Ryland Mundie as chief of the Department of Emergency Medicine in 1981, this area at UAMS has come into its own as a teaching department. The Emergency Medicine Department now has five full time staff physicians with plans to hire two more in the near future. In July of 1983 a three-year fully accredited emergency medicine residency will begin training four residents per year. Already fifty senior medical students complete rotations in the emergency room annually, as do forty-eight interns from the fields of family practice, internal medicine and surgery, and from the transitional internship program. These physicians and students care for some 24,000 patient visits yearly, of which nearly 25% are major or minor trauma cases.

But physicians alone do not make an emergency room; without highly qualified nurses, our emergency physicians would be able to handle only a fraction of these patients. All of our emergency room nurses are certified in Advanced Cardiac Life Support, and fully 60% are certified emergency nurses.

Modern equipment, too, is essential, and University Hospital is as well equipped as any hospital in the state. This emergency room is the only facility in Little Rock with telemetry receiving capability. This equipment gives the paramedics and EMT's on board the ambulances the ability to transmit electrocardiogram tracings from the field directly to the hospital. This greatly increases the speed and accuracy of diagnosis, which may prove to be life-saving.

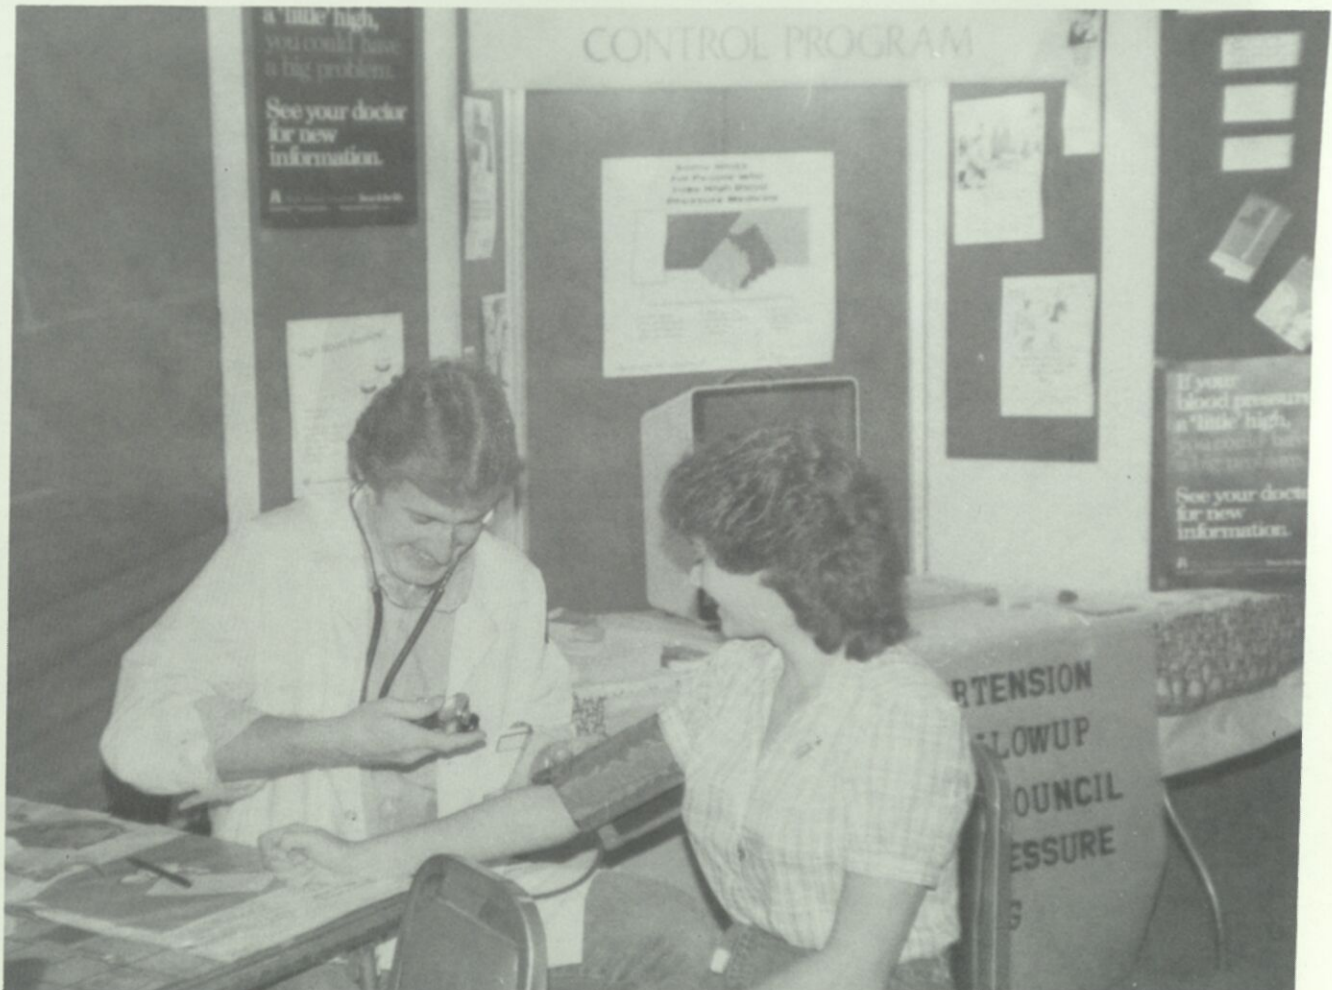

Gone are the days when a nurse's primary duties were emptying bedpans, sponging fevered brows and looking pretty. Doctors more and more are relying on the judgment and skills of nurses to aid in the diagnosis and management of the patients those nurses care for. No other health professional spends as much time with the patients, and no one else on the hospital team knows them or their families as well. The nurse practitioner program emphasizes those skills unique to the nursing profession, turning out highly skilled, well qualified clinical nurses. Who says the good old days were so good?

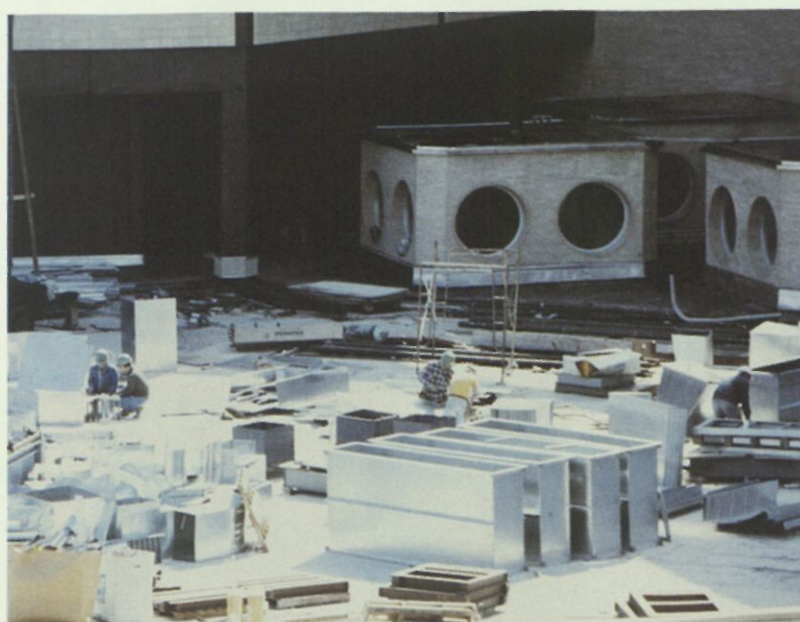

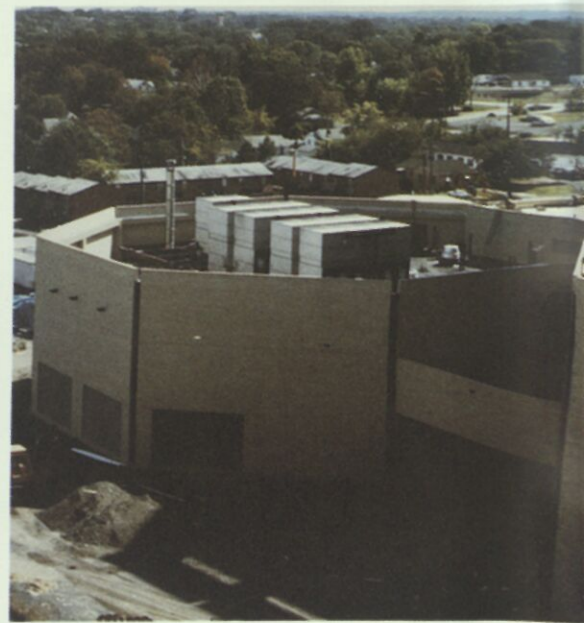

No one on the UAMS campus in the last couple of years, however briefly, could avoid noticing that someone is building the state's largest steel structured building in our backyard. The someone is the Veteran's Administration, and the building is the John L. McClellan Memorial Hospital. It has disrupted our parking, blocked our view, muddied our streets, and brought architectural controversy into our conversation.

Scheduled to open its doors in spring of 1984, the John L. is certain to do more to change the way of life of UAMS students than just decreasing their attendance at the Band Box. The new hospital is designed to be a teaching facility. No more will we need to squeeze two juniors, a senior, two interns, a resident, a staff physician and a patient into a room built for two; no longer will two ward teams collide in the middle of a sixteen bed ward with the resultant loss of a junior for fifteen minutes.

No doubt we will find the John L. McClellan's shortcomings after the doors open; but certainly it will be a more pleasant place to occupy, for students, staff, and patients alike.

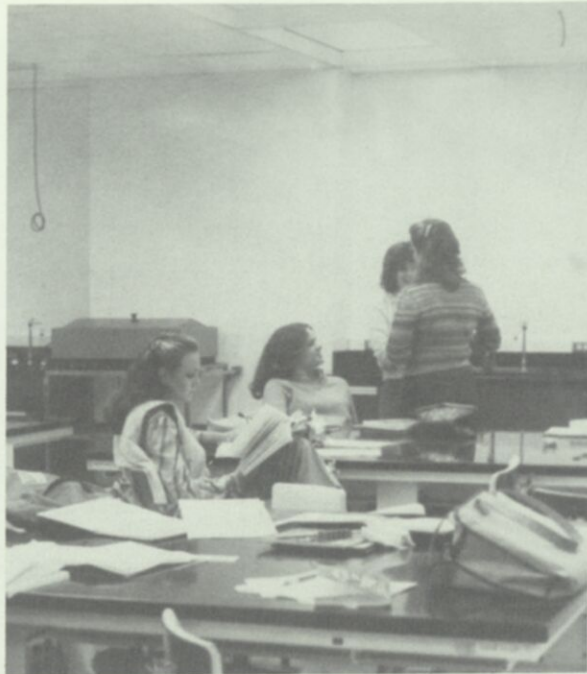

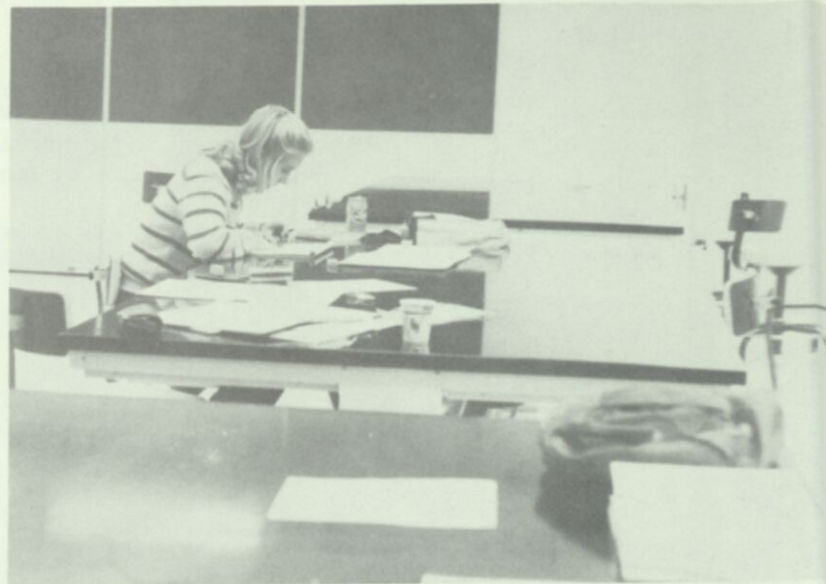

Another year goes by,
and we are the same —
but not quite the same,
as we too are touched by change.

For all the changes we constantly face, there are still patterns that never change, enduring themes that were here before we came and will remain long after we leave.

Before we came here, students studied for exams and sweated over presentations. We have followed suit, as will our successors. The studying habits may vary from student to student, from year to year, but there has always been, and will always be, more to learn than we can absorb.

There is a dormitory atmosphere that changes little from place to place, from time to time. It seems all dorms are too hot or too cold, and all have their obligatory complement of ineradicable six- or eight-legged pests.

The kitchen's always poorly equipped or too crowded, and there's always the problem of where to hang the wet laundry.

There always will be student parties, chances to relax, forget the stress, blow off some steam. Whether it's beer and chips at a friendly poker game, wine and fondue at a sitdown dinner, or just a little illegal liquor and a footstomping good time at a Razor-back game, the result is always the same ...

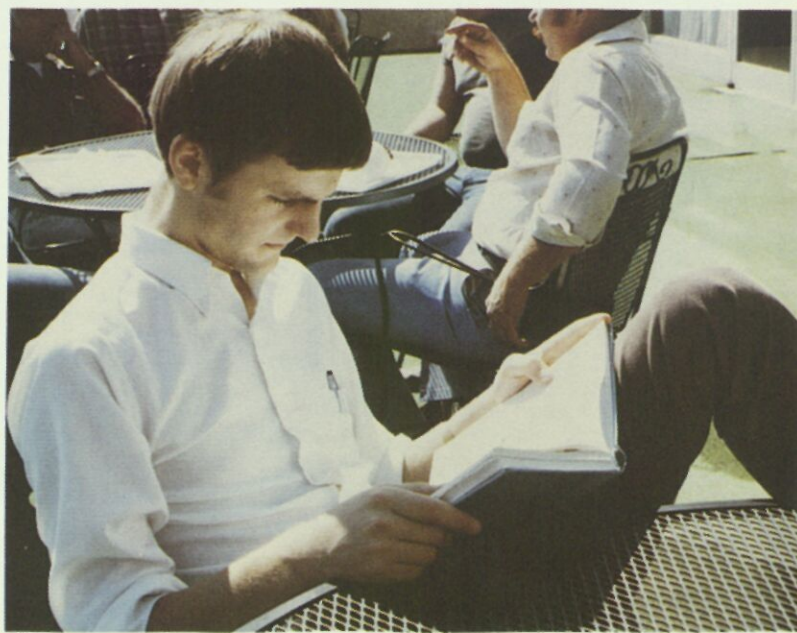

... a little less tension tonight ...

back to the books.

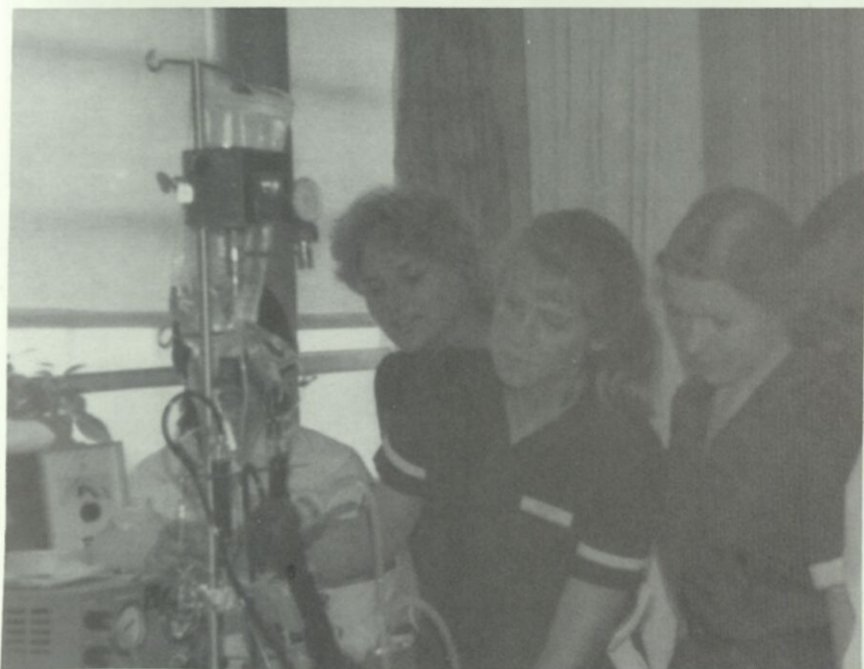

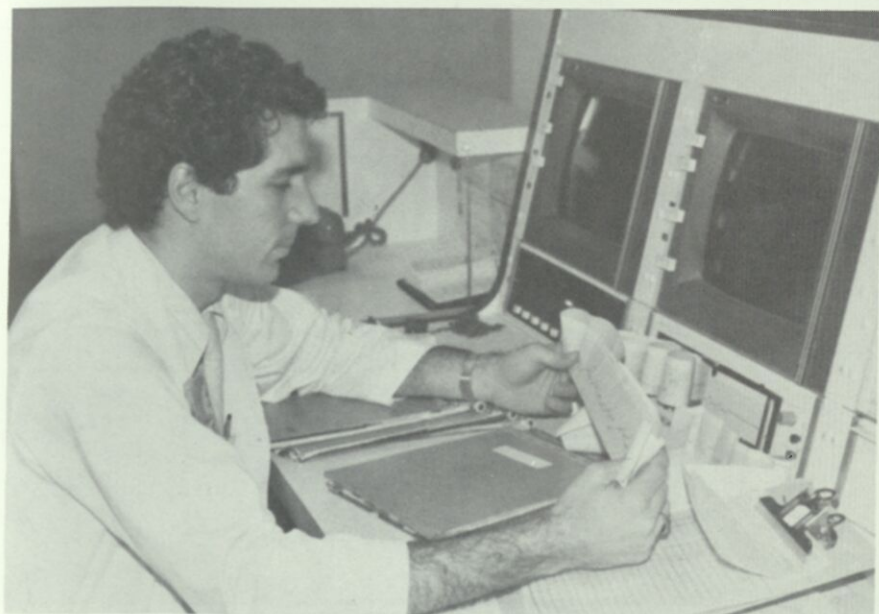

Entering training for a medical or paramedical profession is frequently a difficult and hazardous undertaking. Few of us would make it through without our social support groups. Whether it's parents, siblings, spouses, children, classmates, or friends — anybody the psychologists would call our "significant others" — we'd be hard-pressed to survive without them. God bless 'em. We are where we are, in part because of them.

Always there are patients to care for. Though the average life span is longer than in our predecessors' time, people still grow ill. It has been, and will continue to be, the task of UAMS students and employees to provide for them competent, compassionate health care.

And when we're at the end of our rope, when the big red "F" looms on the horizon, when the party leaves us with a hangover and our friends leave town, when the wife goes home to mother and the dog bites us (or worse) on the foot, we turn to the oldest medicine.

And we laugh.

We laugh at plagiarized cartoons in the canned notes and at practical jokes on each other. (Yes, May, we're the ones who short-sheeted the beds in the OB call room.) We laugh at our teachers, our colleagues, and ourselves. In the words of Leroy LeNarz, five time nominee for the SOB award, it's not worth doing if you can't have a little fun.

IN MEMORIAM

By Medicine May Life Be Prolonged
Yet Death
Will Sieze The Doctor Too.

Dr. Albert E. Kalderon, M.D., professor of Pathology at UAMS, died of cancer on February 12, 1983. Dr. Kalderon was born in Istanbul, Turkey, on June 27, 1933. He received his Certificate of Maturity in Sciences (baccalaureate) from the College of St. Michael at Istanbul. He went on to receive his doctoral training and degree from the Istanbul University Faculty of Medicine in 1961. After serving an internship and residency in the United States, Dr. Kalderon was given a research fellowship from the department of Anatomy of the McGill University at Montreal, Canada. In his first postgraduate appointment, he worked as an assistant pathologist at the Rhode Island Hospital of Brown University at Providence. He became a naturalized citizen of the United States in June, 1968. He established a residence in Little Rock where he was a professor and director of Anatomical Pathology since 1975.

The UAMS professor was a member of numerous professional societies and organizations, and served as president of the Rhode Island Society of Pathologists in 1971. He authored and/or co-authored more than 35 articles that have appeared in medical and professional journals over the past 20 years, including American Journal of Medicine, Clinical Immunology and Histochemie. Dr. Kalderon was one of the most popular professors at UAMS; the students voted him to receive the 1977-78 Golden Apple Award as the "outstanding University instructor of basic sciences."

Arvind Malhotra, M.D.

UAMS students and employees mourned the passing of Dr. Arvind Malhotra on January 7, 1983. Dr. Malhotra was a Fellow in Gastroenterology, an appointment received in July, 1981. He had a keen interest in immunology, developed after receipt of a research scholarship in medical biochemistry at the University of Manchester, UK. There, his research included, most significantly, the immunology of cystic fibrosis. At this institution, his research efforts were focused upon studies of GI pharmacology and esophageal manometry. His dedication to his research and to his patients was unflagging in terms of time and diligence. Having suffered from an earlier serious illness himself, he had a great deal of compassion for the victims of physical disease. Strains of his polished British could be heard outlining to patients their regimen on the road to recovery, lovingly — and chidingly, if need be.

Born in Rangoon, India, Dr. Malhotra occasionally attended gatherings of the Friends of India, keeping alive the culture of the "land of lakes and palaces." He often visited the First Christian Church, originally from "intellectual curiosity." Later, however, this casual interest reached the level of a commitment, reflected by his statement that he had come to a "crossroads" in his life. May find such comfort in the assurance that this final crossing was made in the peace and security of the indwelling Christ. He was loved and respected by those who worked at his side. We all shall remember him fondly.

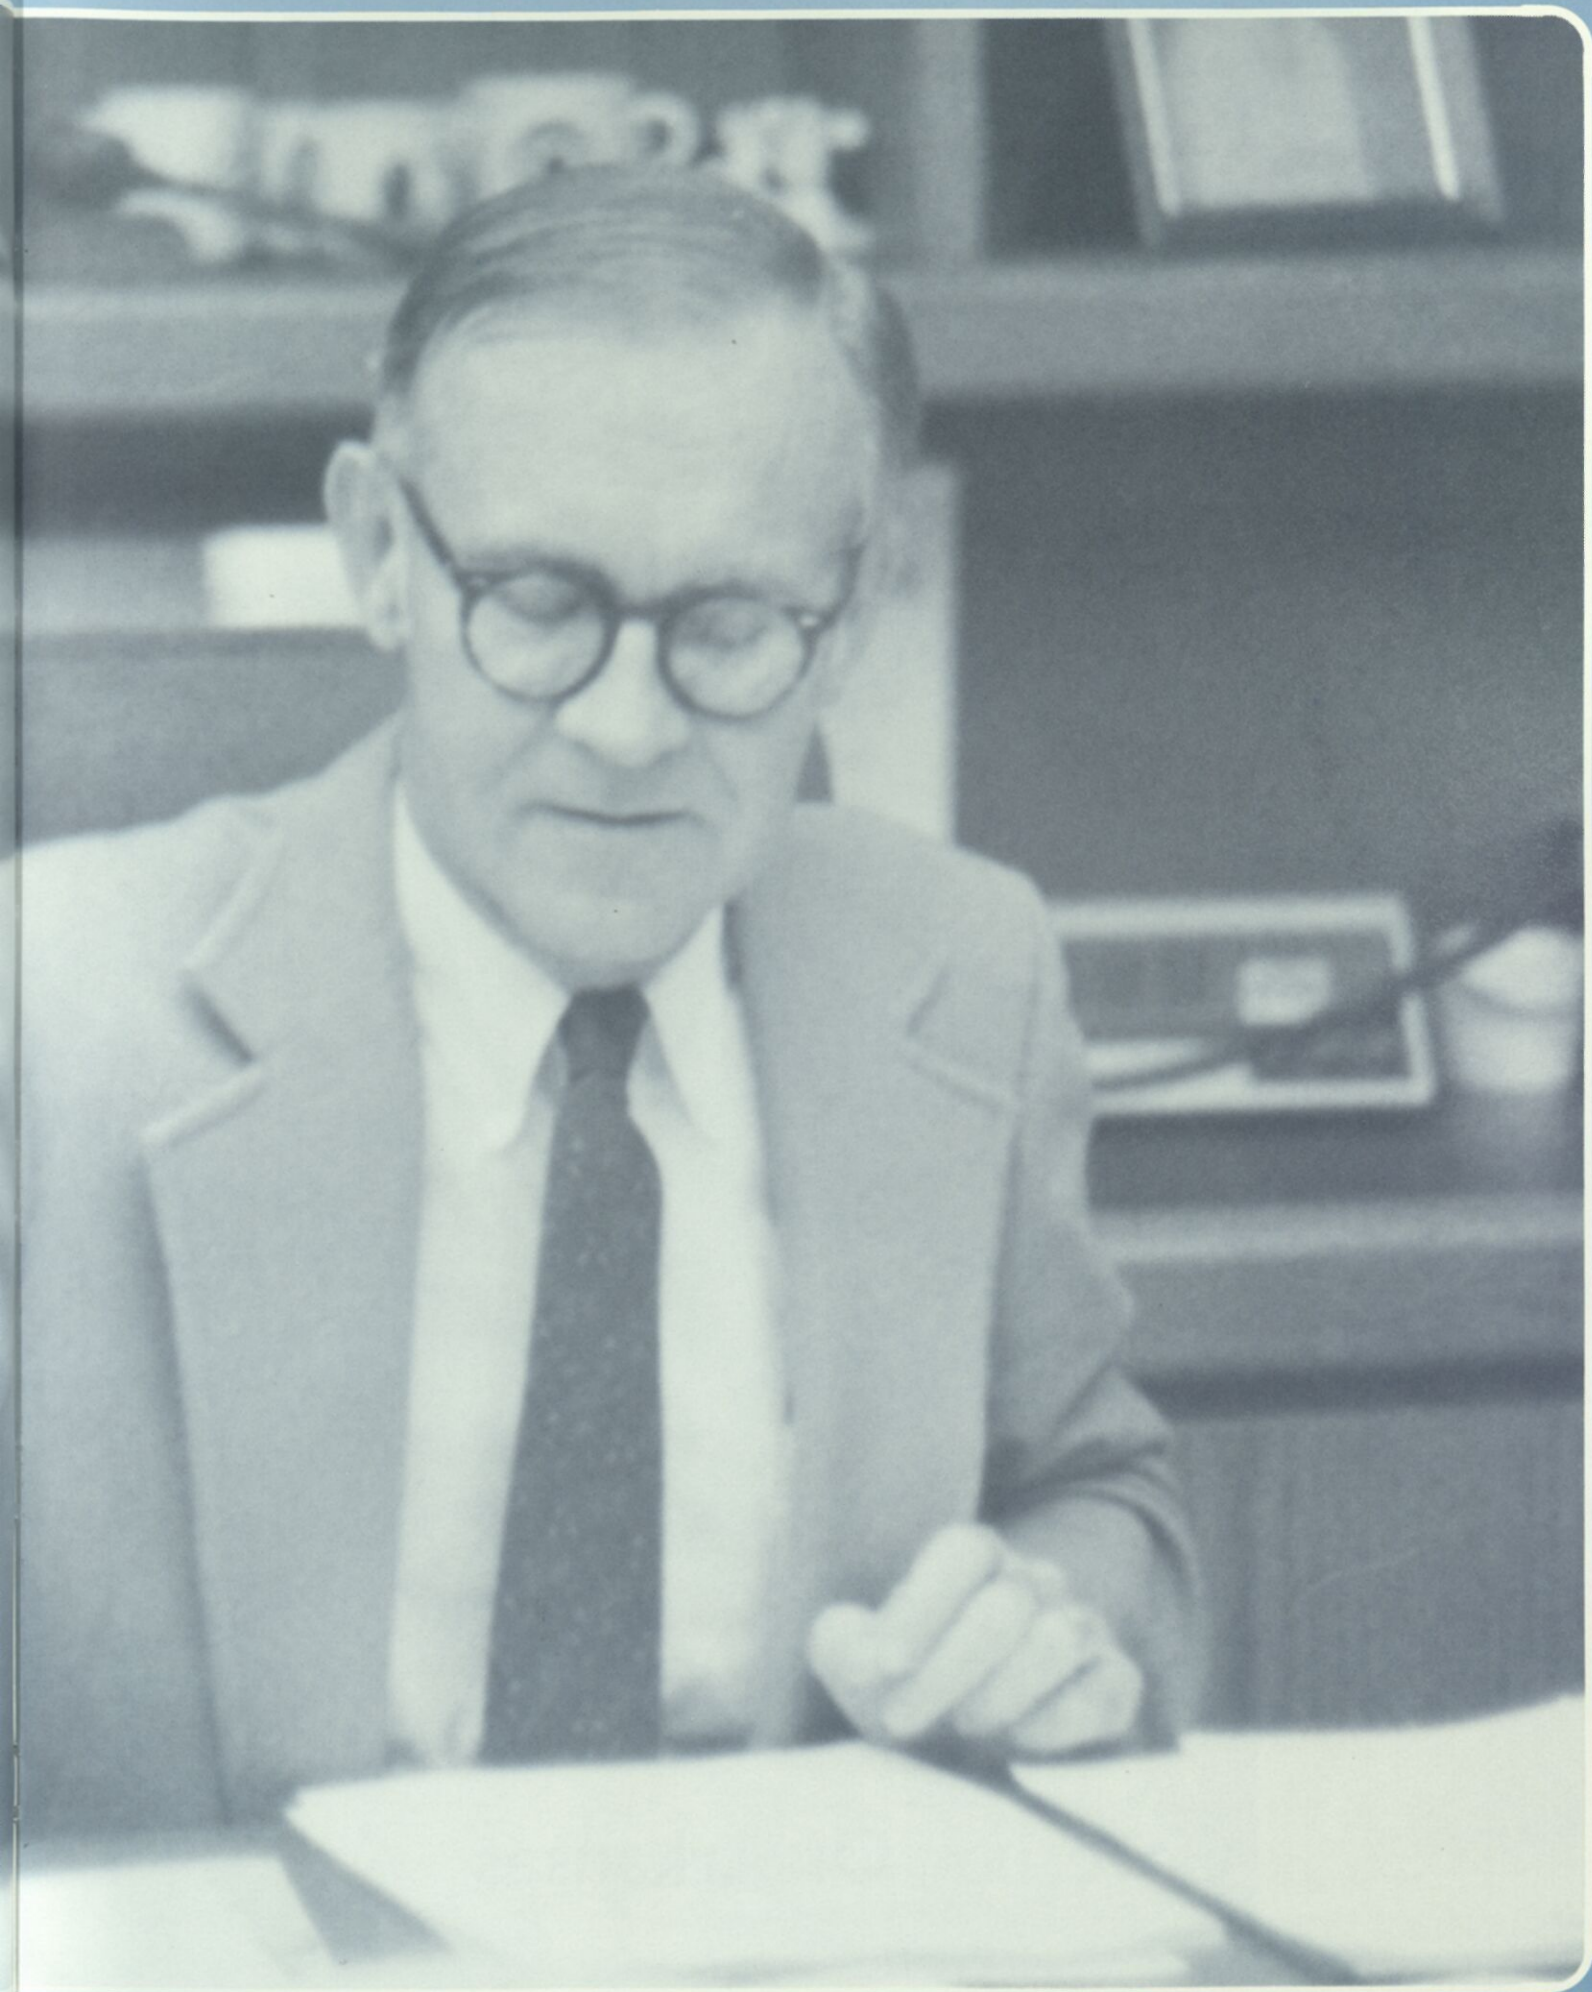

We Will Miss Them.

THE MATCH

The National Residency Matching Program is a plan by which senior students and residency programs are able to find what they need to fill their needs. The purpose of the program is to keep everyone honest in their dealings while looking for a job. The results of the match are released in March, a day which brings both joy and anxiety to students. As complicated as it is, and as difficult as it is to wait for, the program works very well. Of all the Arkansas students this year, 93% placed in either their first or second choices.

THE FLEX

Each year during December the senior students at UAMS sit for the Federal Licensing Exam (FLEX). This is a three day exam covering all that we have learned (?) in the last four years. Each autumn finds the Senior busily trying to determine how best to study for such an exam (and spending very little time studying). Some dust off the old anatomy and biochem texts and buckle down to study. Others prefer to hit the clinical medicine, surgery and pediatrics. The remainder rub lucky rabbits feet and hope ... and pray ... and wish ...

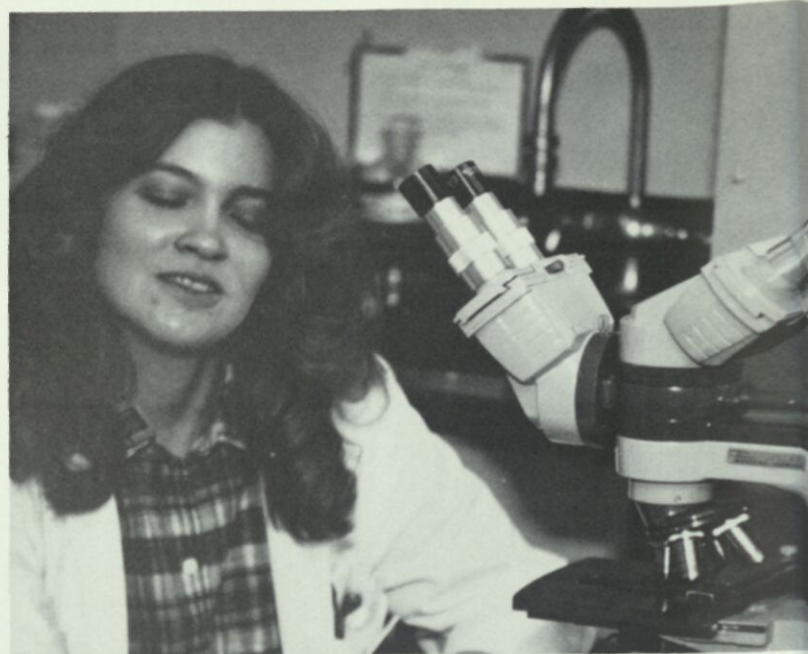

Whatever the method of preparation, the test days find all seniors busily at the task, doing the best they can with the knowledge they have acquired.

WORKING

Despite rumors to the contrary, Seniors do spend time in the clinics and hospitals. Thirty-six weeks of our senior year are spent in various clinical and academic elective rotations of the Senior's choice. This allows for greater flexibility while we apply and interview for residency programs, study for the FLEX, or undertake various personal endeavors.

TIME OUT

Despite our busy senior schedules, we do find time for ourselves on occasion. This time is spent in ways as diverse as the class members themselves. Interviewing is one excuse that affords the Senior the excuse to travel. For those more limited by family or budget, there are the usual past-times and hobbies.

Whatever the method, we have learned that our time off is valuable and should be used to its best advantage. So while we develop our clinical skills, we also develop our own methods of relaxation and recreation.

Sometimes one must wait until sunset to see that it has been a beautiful day.

ORIENTATION WEEK

One of the biggest changes that transpires during the medical school experience is the metamorphosis from "book oriented" Sophomores to "Procedure oriented" JMS's (i.e. Scut Pups). To ease this transition, each year the upcoming Juniors are presented with a week of orientation-compliments of their predecessors. During our week we were told what to expect from the different Junior rotations, and then given a preview of plying the tricks of our trade by inserting various needles and tubes into each other. Luckily for us (and our patients) neither the rotations, nor the work, have been as bad as they threatened to be then.

ORIENTATION WEEK

Orientation Week is a time when new students and faculty members get to know each other and the college. It is a time when students learn about the college's history, traditions, and values. It is also a time when students learn about the college's academic programs and the resources available to them. Orientation Week is a time when students learn about the college's location and the surrounding community. It is a time when students learn about the college's policies and procedures. It is a time when students learn about the college's faculty and staff. It is a time when students learn about the college's students. It is a time when students learn about the college's future.

WHAT I DID FOR LOVE

Kiss today good-bye
The sweetness and the sorrow
We did what we had to do
And I can't regret what I did for love

Look, my eyes are dry
The gift was ours to borrow
It's as if we always knew
But I won't forget what I did for love

Gone ...
Love is never gone
As we travel on
Love's what we'll remember

Kiss today good-bye
And point me t'ward tomorrow
Wish me luck, the same to you
Won't forget
Can't regret
What I did for love

DENTAL HYGIENE

Contrary to popular belief, the skills of the dental hygienist involve more than "scraping the stuff off of people's teeth." The realm also includes dental radiography, nutritional counseling, placing sealants and temporary fillings, making study models, polishing amalgams (fillings), performing soft tissue curettage, and giving patient instruction. (The correct method of toothbrushing is not quite as easy as one may think.)

Many of these duties have only recently become a part of our education. The field is constantly expanding as more factors are discovered as to the cause of caries and periodontal disease and what can be done to counteract them.

Our profession is ideally geared toward the preventive aspect. Patient education is stressed. Students are encouraged to become a part of the community in an effort to reach more of the public for motivation in attaining dental care.

This year brought some changes to the school through the acquisition of a new director, Dr. Kurt Truax, and clinic supervisor, Miss Cindy Brown. Patient classification is now set up on a five rather than a four-point scale. However, patient supply did not always measure up to the students' demands. Naturally, quality of patient care was kept at the same maximum standard.

Seniors grasped to fulfill clinical requirements for graduation. State, Regional, and National boards are taken, and at last, scaling as well as schooling are complete. We're ready to go out into the real world and make some bucks.

RADIOLOGIC TECHNOLOGY

Radiologic Technology is a dynamic health care profession and an integral part of the health care team concept. The registered radiographer performs an important function in the rapidly growing medical field of radiology. As a part of the health team, the radiographer performs a variety of radiologic procedures while maintaining good patient care and radiation safety guidelines. The product of these procedures are used in the diagnosis and treatment of disease.

EMERGENCY MEDICAL SCIENCES

The UAMS paramedic program brought together ten people from various parts of the country. We all had the single goal of acquiring the necessary knowledge to provide expert pre-hospital care.

Many disappointments were ours as quite a few of our programs were dropped. In spite of these disappointments we struggled through the didactic learning, acquired the skills in the clinical programs and applied them both in the field internship. Though it was a struggle to get through the programs the hardest part is still ahead . . . rendering care in an uncontrolled possibly hostile environment where trained assistance is not readily available should we need it.

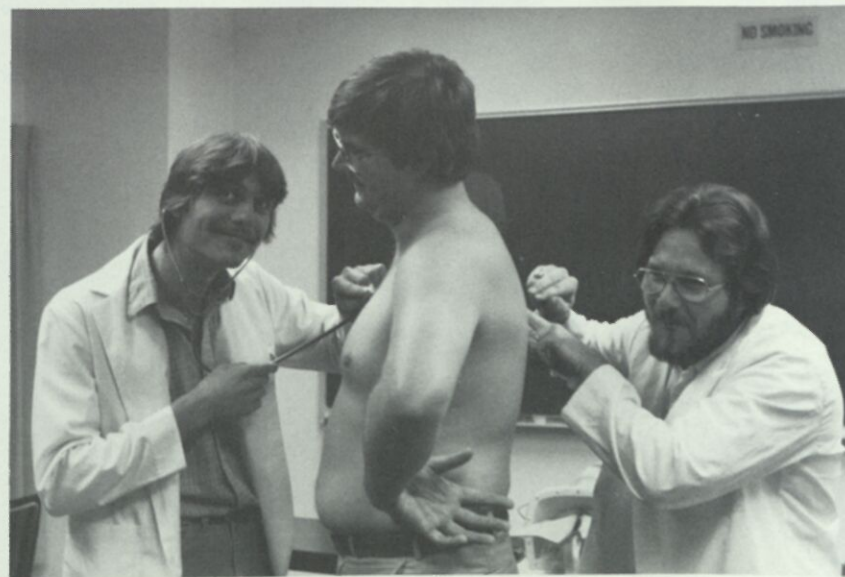

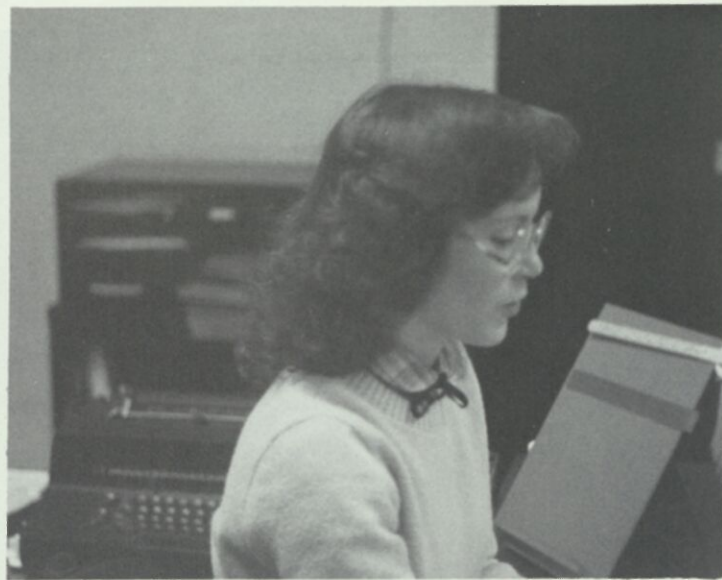

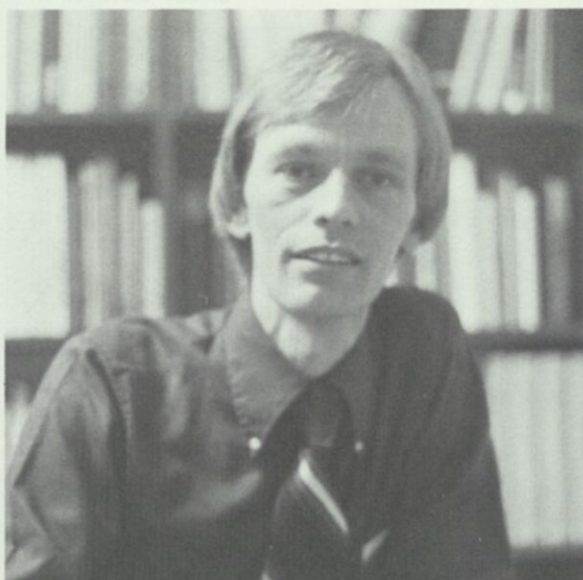

It is this unique challenge in the field of medicine that separates EMT's and EMT-P's from the in-hospital personnel. We willingly accept this challenge and attempt to provide the best possible patient care under adverse conditions.

SURGICAL TECHNOLOGY

The Surgical Technologist is a skilled person qualified by didactic and clinical training to function in association with nurses and surgeons in providing the best possible care to the surgical patient.

The Surgical Technology program, in Little Rock, is one initiated and supported by the Veteran's Administration Medical Center. It is also an approved program of the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences College of Health Related Professions. The program is accredited by the Committee on Allied Health Education and Accreditation and the Joint Review Committee on Education for the Surgical Technologists.

Learning experiences include theory, laboratory and practice, and clinical experience in the Operating Room, Recovery Room and Obstetrical area of the VA and affiliating hospitals.

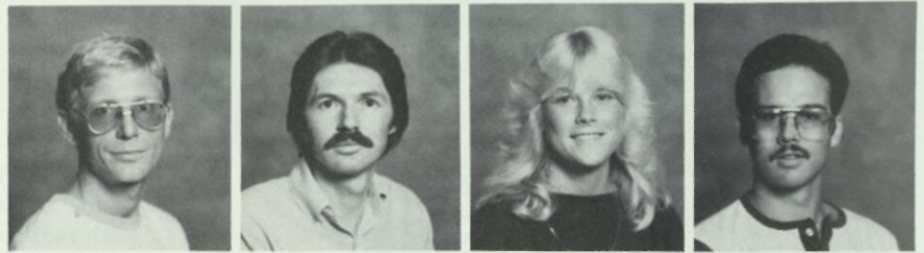

Upon successful completion of the 10-month program, graduates receive a Certificate in Surgical Technology and are qualified to take the national certifying examination for certification by the Association of Surgical Technologists. Such certification assures prospective employers that the graduate's academic preparation meets the national standards as defined by the Association of Surgical Technologists.

The 2-year curriculum leading to an Associate Degree in Surgical Technology provides a broad educational base for functioning on the surgical team and equips the student for a greater degree of career mobility in the health profession.

In any college or university, most graduating classes are remembered for one or a few actions or people who in some way were distinctive. Maybe it's for the frat that threw the dean in the fountain, or the team that won the conference championship, or the musical genius who played with the Philharmonic. Some classes are even memorable for their incredibly uniform mediocrity; but almost every class is remembered for some one thing. The College of Medicine Class of '83 long thought that we would be remembered solely as the class of guinea pigs. Remember the multi-disciplinary exams? But now we have a better claim to fame, one that is a more suitable memorial for a class that has endured much. For, on the FLEX, we had the lowest failure rate of any class produced by the University of Arkansas College of Medicine, and the lowest failure rate in the nation as well. And so, in the end, we prove ourselves.

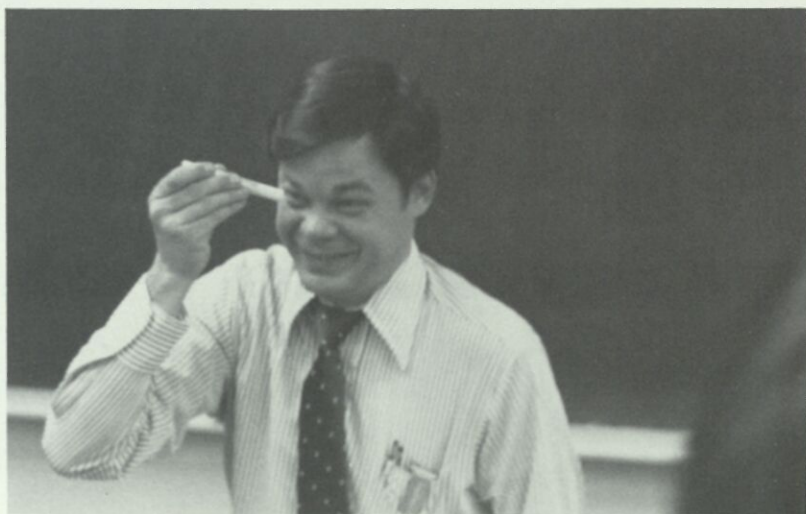

No, BeeGee, I'm not a movie star.

Sure! I'll take you all on.

And if you turn it this way, you see a picture of a

The motto of KE is "promoting women in pharmacy," but the membership is open to men also; During the year KE sponsors bake sales, dinner drawings, and a candy sale. The members work at the Arkansas Health Fair, organize Christmas and Easter parties for local children's homes and give a Thanksgiving basket to a needy family. The Beta Iota chapter at the College of Pharmacy is a member of the fraternity of Rho Chi, the honor society of all colleges of pharmacy. The members of Rho Chi are required to achieve a GPA of at least 3.0 and in addition must be in the top 20 per cent of their class. The initiation of new members takes place after the initiates have completed the first three semesters of study. Membership in Rho Chi demonstrates that the student is representative of the best the College of Pharmacy has to offer.

ALPHA OMEGA ALPHA

ALPHA OMEGA ALPHA

Alpha Omega Alpha is the only national honor medical society in the world. "raison d'être" can be expressed in a phrase: to recognize and perpetuate excellence in the medical profession. As stated in the society's Constitution, "Alpha Omega Alpha is organized for education purpose exclusively and not for profit, and its activities shall be the promotion of scholarship and research in medical schools, the encouragement of a high standard of character and conduct among medical students and graduates, and the recognition of high attainment in medical science, practice and related fields." To fulfill the role it has set for itself, Alpha Omega Alpha elects outstanding medical students, graduates, faculty, and honor members to its ranks. Election to AOA is a distinction that accompanies a physician throughout his or her career. Especially for the younger physician, the society provides a forum for the exchange of ideas, as well as a source for valuable contacts. The society key is designed after the Manubrium Sterni. The letters A, O, and A are engraved on the key, represent not only the name of the honor society, but also the essential words in its motto.

"Ἄξιος ὠφελεῖν τοὺς ἀλγοῦντας"
"Worthy to serve the suffering"

When UAMS students want to learn what's going on around the campus, they turn to the pages of the student newspaper, the MEDICO. Whether it's new construction, departmental reorganization, or the results of intramural contests, events of importance to UAMS students are reported on monthly.

Funds for the MEDICO come from advertising revenue, support from the Arkansas Caduceus Club, and a small portion of student tuition. Almost 7000 copies of each issue are distributed, most of which go by mail to graduates of the UAMS College of Medicine throughout the state and across the country. The remainder are placed at strategic locations across the campus.

Joe Robbins was editor, reporting staff, and columnist for the 1982-83 MEDICO. This is the second year he has edited the paper. Jodi Shull draws the layouts and sets the type; we can thank her for the professional appearance of our newspaper.

If you're having trouble telling which of the people in these pictures is Jodi and which is Joe, I'll give you a hint: Joe's the one with short hair, and Jodi's the good-looking one.

The Photography Contest That Wasn't

What a great way to bring in high-quality candids for the yearbook! Hold a photography contest and put the winners in the annual, as well as awarding a suitable cash prize. And all those pictures that weren't quite as good would still be helpful to add a little interest to the book. I don't remember who came up with the idea — someone in that ASG meeting. I think — but we all thought it sounded good. A little free publicity courtesy of the publicity committee and the Medico, and the entries would start pouring in. That's the way we figured it.

Two entries.

All is not lost; both photographs are certainly worth including in our book. We are indebted to the two photographers, Dixie Knight and Annette Post, for their interest. By editorial fiat the contest was declared a tie, and they will share the prize money. In the future we hope that response will be better.

MEDICAL SCHOOL STUDENT COUNCIL

The council is responsible for the Annual Skit Dance, which each year attracts from 600 to 800 students and employees of UAMS. It is also involved with organizing the student body in selection of the Preclinical and Clinical Golden Apple Awards, as well as the Resident of the Year. The council is also involved in helping students schedule senior electives and residency interviews across the country. The council also works in cooperation with other student organizations to support activities and supply equipment for UAMS students.

Two heads aren't necessarily better than one.

Anything you say, sir.

It has been brought to the attention of this editor that some people might object to the type of humor found in this book. We first must comment that the captions contained herein do not necessarily reflect the views of the editorial staff of the 1983 Caduceus and certainly do not reflect the views of the administration.

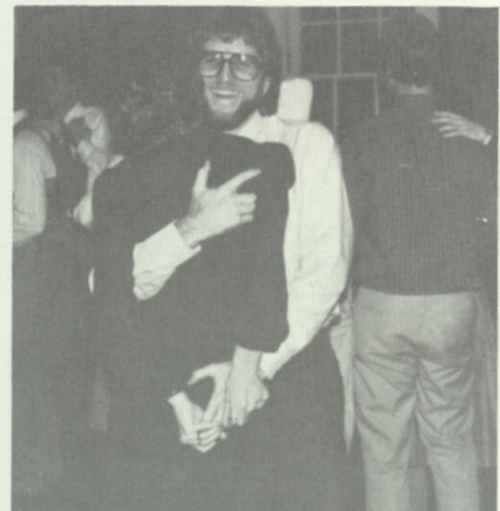

However, we are always open to suggestion and we have never objected to constructive criticism, no matter how loathsome the source may be. For this reason we have included a detachable Official Complaint Form at the back of this book. Anyone wishing to lodge a complaint may fill out this form (in triplicate) and deliver it to us in Tacoma, Washington. Only hand-delivered complaints will be accepted; we wish to sneer at, I mean, meet our critics face to face. — Ed.

JUNIOR MEDICAL AUXILIARY

How many to take this time?

No one told me that they wet!

How can one person tell another person thank you? There is no real proper way to do so. Instead you take the knowledge that you learned from them and share it with others. That is what we as the JMA can do for Mrs. Chudy. Ann has been our leader for at least the four years that I have been with the JMA. In that time we have shared her fellowship, which is what the JMA is all about. This group of people is the perfect way for wives, and better halves, to get to know each other in a relaxed surrounding. Such as the get together in the park, the exercise class, and the microwave class. We all learned something in each meeting, if not a special subject then about each other. So THANK YOU our dear leader for the opportunity to achieve our goal.

Stretch my what?

We at the Caduceus owe a debt of gratitude to the management of Pinky's Photo Service. They developed and printed more than three-fourths of the candids in this book, cheaper than anyone else would do it and as quickly as we could hope for. Ever since I became acquainted with them through the yearbook I have taken all my personal photographic business to them. I think you should too. — Ed.

EPILOGUE

All good things must come to an end. Every class, every rotation, no matter how good or how bad, is eventually over. So with the 1982-1983 school year at UAMS.

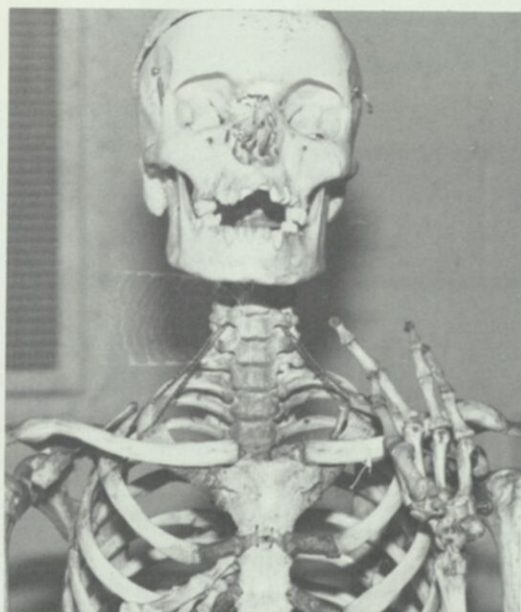

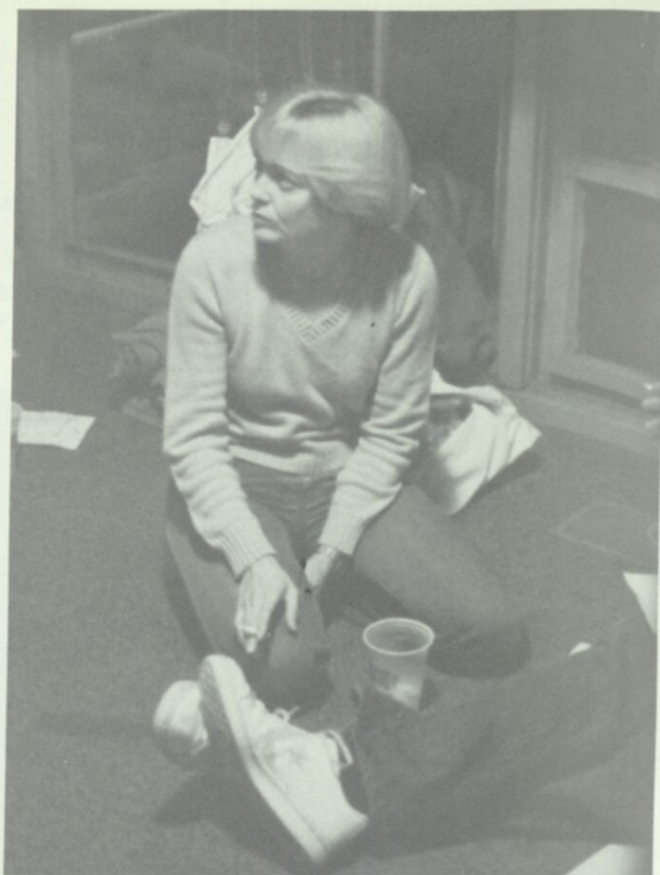

Our past, our present, our future; the changing patterns of our lives. For some, there will be little change from this year to the next — perhaps a little more clinical work, a little less classroom. For others, there will be drastic change — from the shelter of the scholastic life to the reality of the working world. Yet for all of us, there is one thing which will never change: we each have committed ourselves to a caring profession.

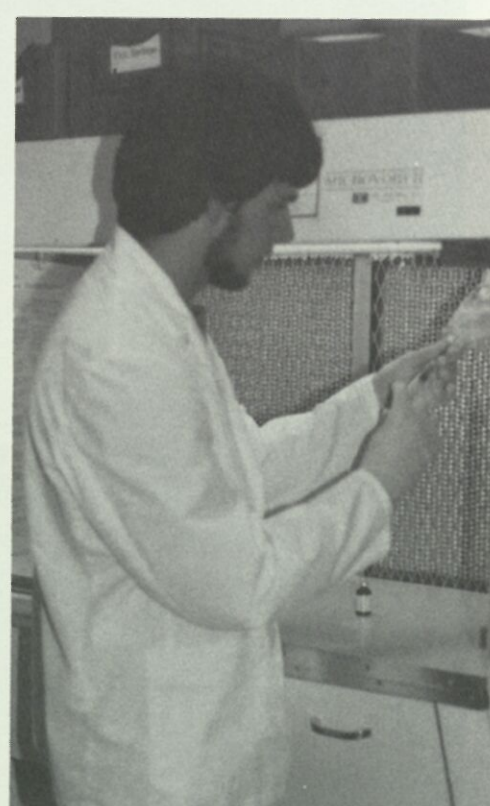

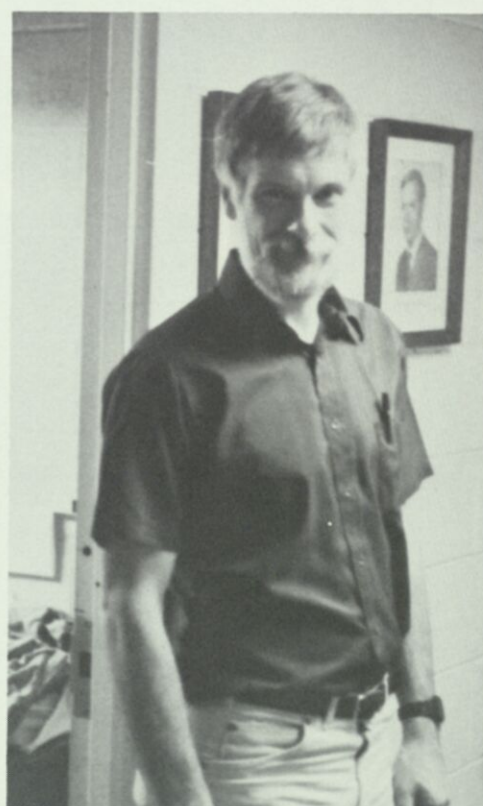

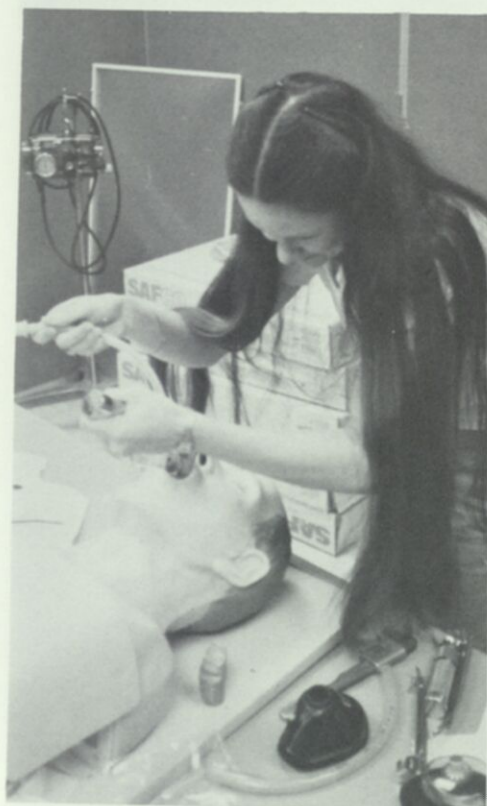

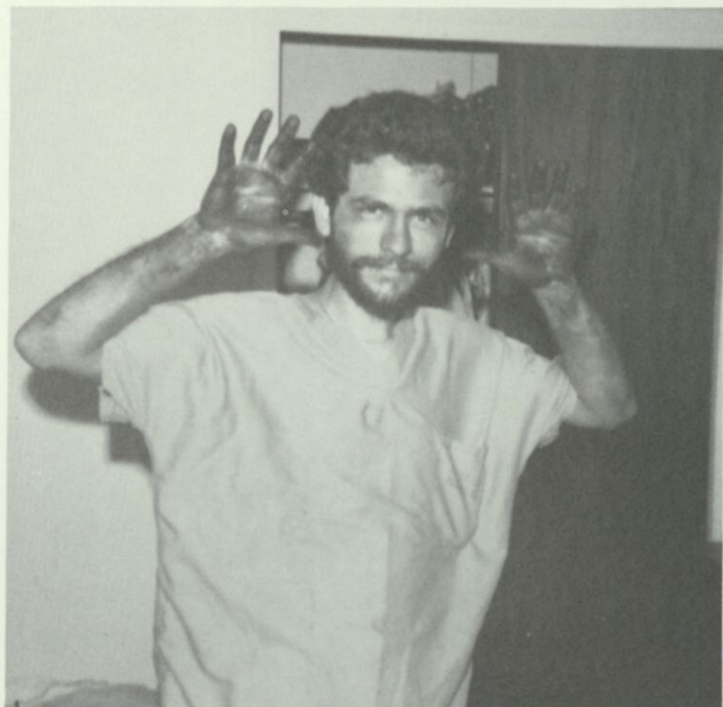

Another school year draws to a close, and an end is made. For the graduates especially. We go forth, with some degree of uncertainty, from this place that has become so familiar. We may have hated it at times, we may have loved it at times, but at least we each had our own niche here, and we knew what to expect. We were a group, a class reaching toward a common goal; the goal reached, the purpose of the class is at an end, and once more we are individuals only. We do not ever consciously do anything for the last time without a feeling of regret.

We look ahead, making plans for our futures. The professions we have entered will constantly challenge us with change, and in truth our life of study has only just begun.

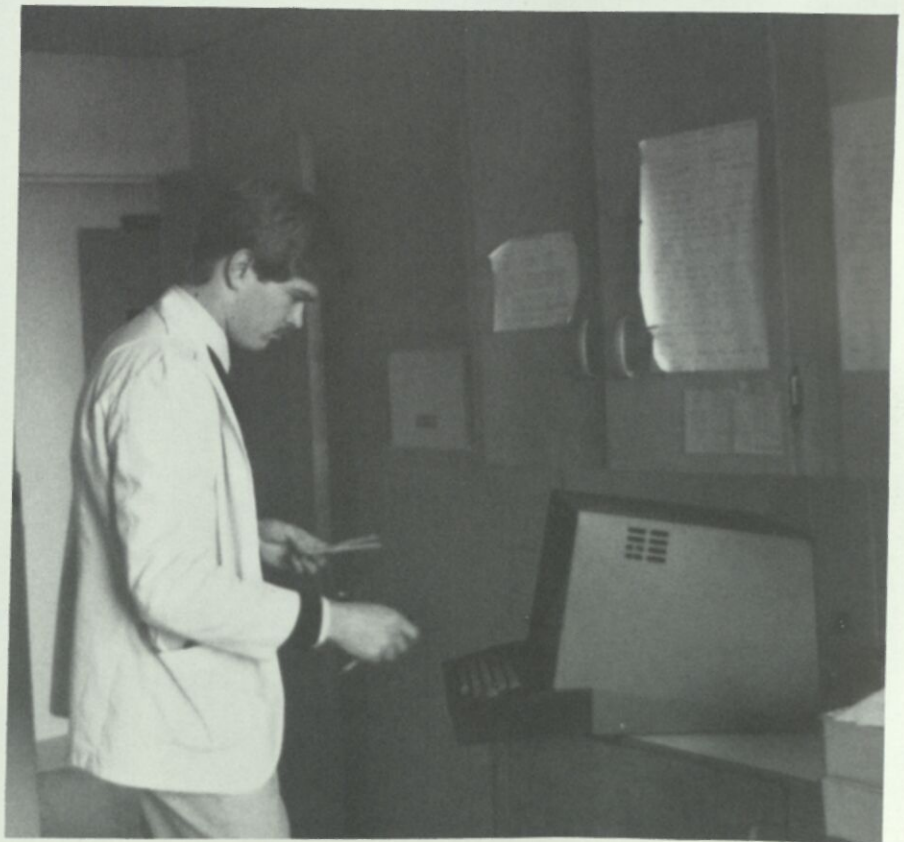

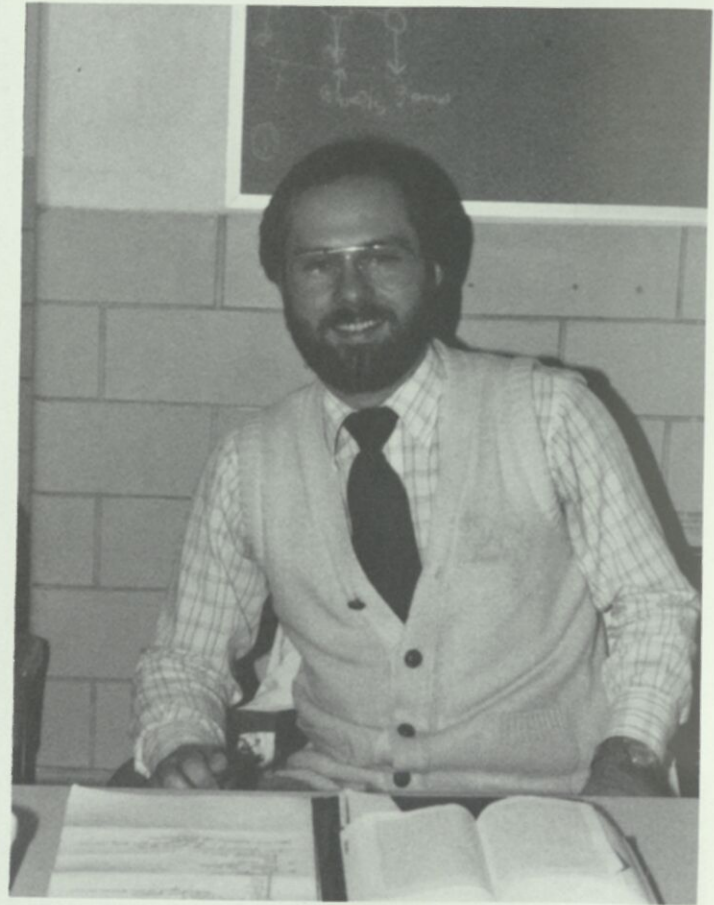

Another school year draws to a close, and a beginning is made.

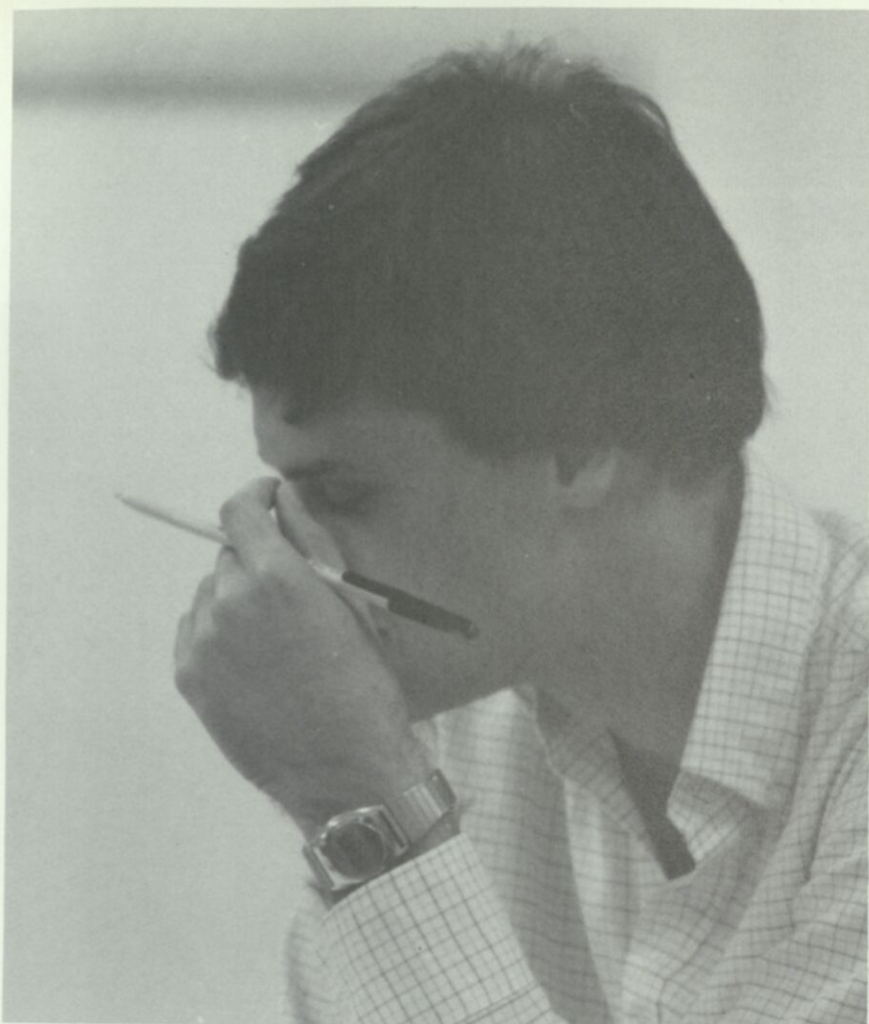

Action and reaction, ebb and flow, trial and error, change — this is the rhythm of living. Out of our over-confidence, fear; out of our fear, clearer vision, fresh hope. And out of hope — progress.

Bruce Barton

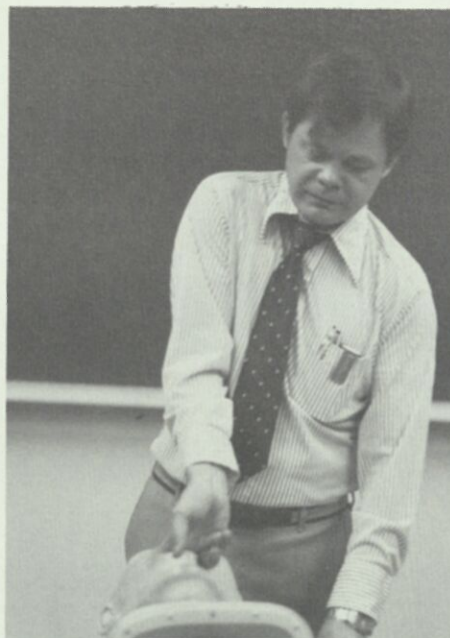

Today is not yesterday. We ourselves change. How then, can our works and thoughts, if they are always to be the fittest, continue always the same. Change, indeed, is painful, yet ever needful; and if memory have its force and worth, so also has hope.

Thomas Carlyle

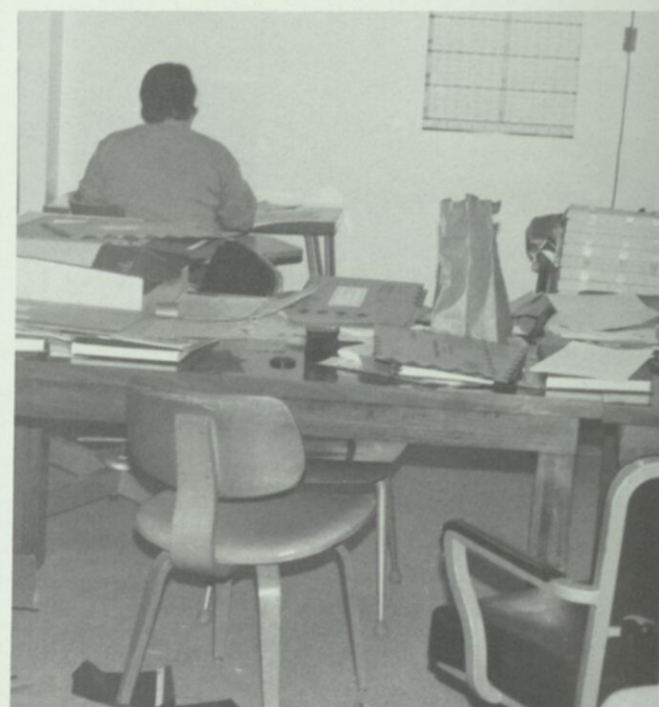

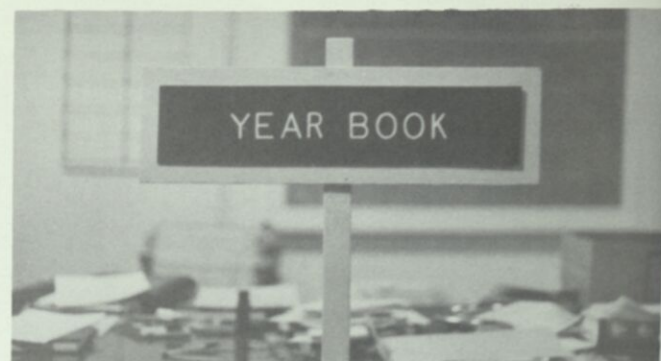

Well, we did it. We started later than any other yearbook staff, and we got the books here on time and not too far over budget. That's a substantial improvement over the last two years. Maybe next year's editor can do me one better and put out a good book within budget. I hope so.

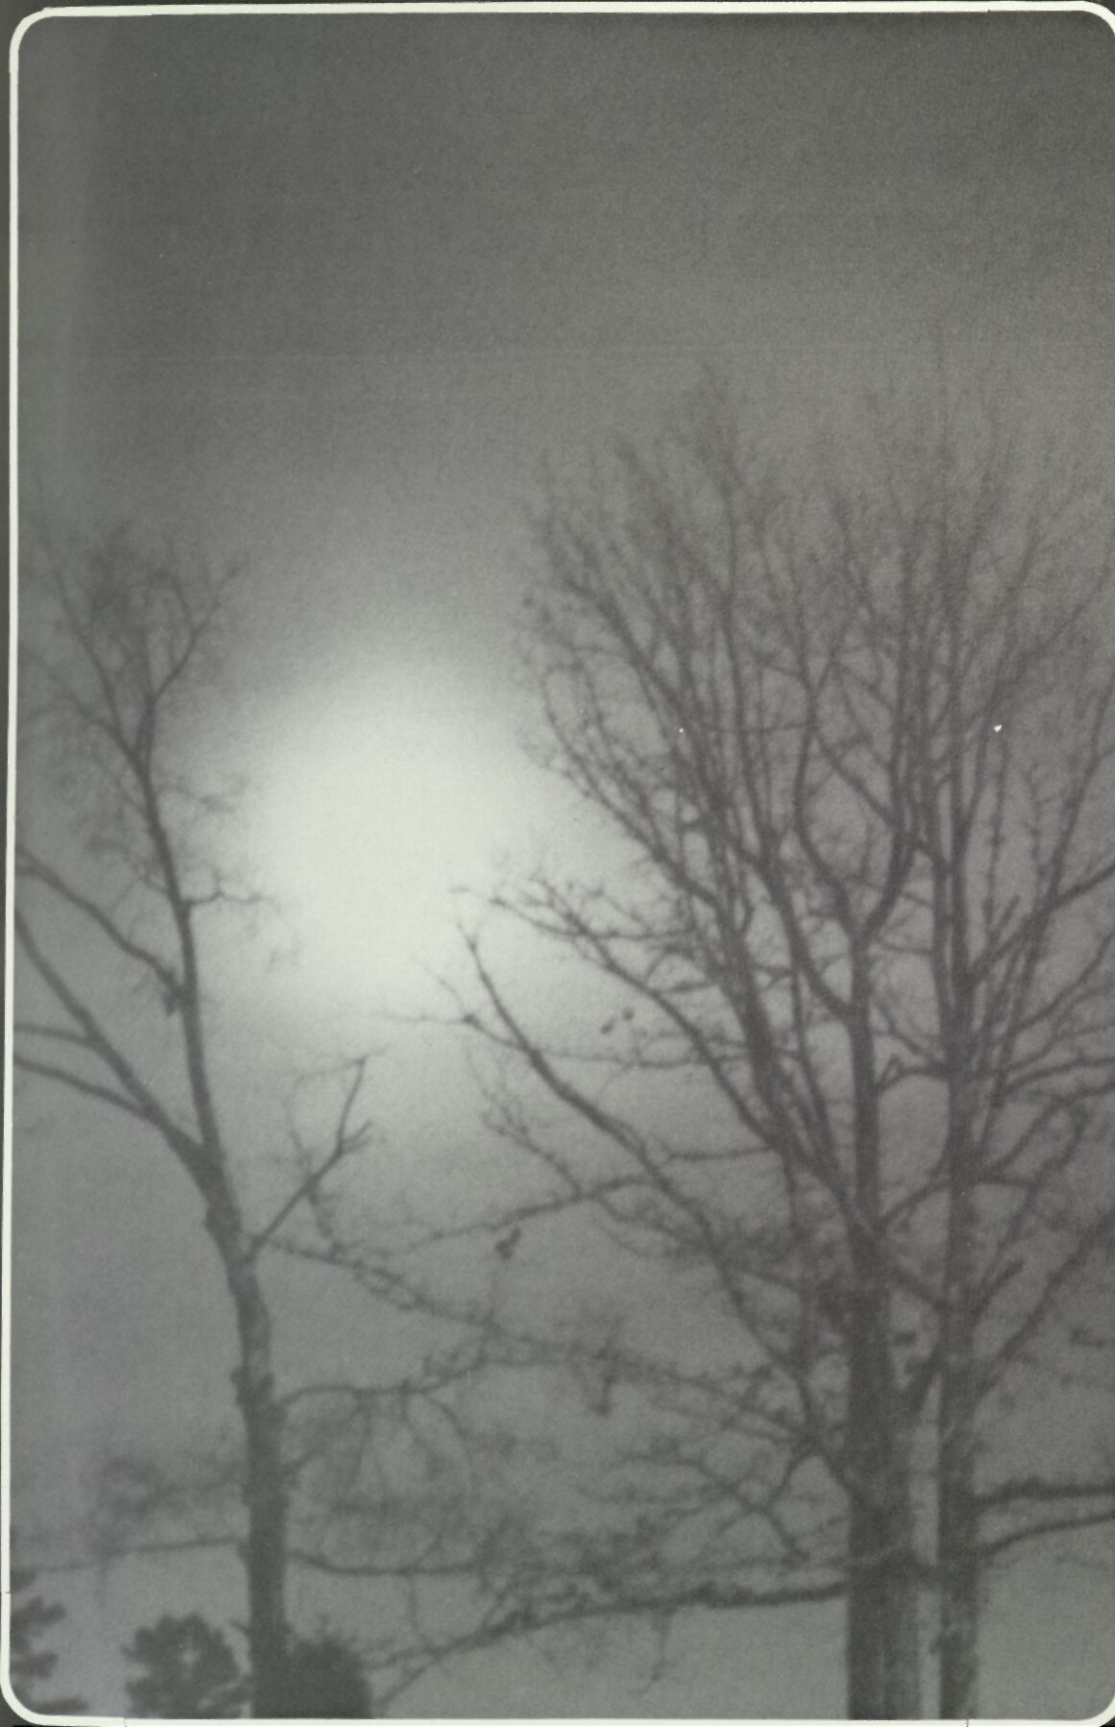

What began a little over five months ago when I answered an ad in the Caduceus is over now, except for the proofs yet to come and the breathholding as I wait to see if you like this book as much as I hope you do. It suffers, perhaps, from being too much my own personal production; had more people been willing to help that would not have been the case.

Before I close I must express a special debt I owe to some very special people who came through when I needed it most. They made an intolerable job a little easier. I'm deeply grateful to Cheryl McCormac, who took on the insurmountable task of organizing the CHRP section, and kept my spirits up with her irrepressible vivaciousness. Laura Justice managed to put out the graduate school section, despite the fact that everything that could go wrong did, and with a vengeance. Jimmy Acklin, with help from May Jackson and Fun Fong, made the senior medicine section the best in the book. Of course I'm a little biased about that. Wendell Pahls supplied much of the humor in this book, but informed me that I had to take credit for anything that offends anyone. The entire staff spent many hours for very little pay to turn out the Caduceus; it's a much bigger job than it appears. My last word of thanks is for my wife, Dreama, without whom I could not have done as well as I did. She answered questions, she put together the AHEC section, and several times she kept my discouragement from turning into downright despair. And no, the last page of this book is not a full-length picture of my wife and I, nor a candle-lit table at the Capitol Club. This isn't my book, it's yours — I put it together, but you supplied the material.

Whatever college you're in, you've chosen a caring profession; never forget to care.

No greater opportunity can fall the lot of a human being than to be a physician. In the care of the suffering he needs technical skill, scientific knowledge, and human understanding. He who uses these with courage, humility, and wisdom will provide a unique service for his fellow man and will build an enduring edifice of character within himself. The physician should ask of his destiny no more than this, and he should be content with no less.

Tinsley Harrison
